Space Travel Prophets Had Tough Start

By WILLY LEY

Copyright, 1957, The Chicago Sun-Times

Third of a Series

Prof. Robert H. Goddard's treatise advocating extensive rocket research appeared in Washington in 1920. Prof. Hermann Oberth's book, proving the theoretical possibility of space travel, appeared in Munich in 1923. The reactions of the two audiences to these two works was as different as possible.

Goddard's book was received with a small amount of ridicule on the one hand and brought him a small measure of financial support on the other. But there was no scientific criticism or controversy.

Oberth's book was received with complete seriousness, caused many pages of learned criticism in professional journals and no financial support whatever. And it started things going on an international front.

As has been mentioned in a previous article, the Russians rediscovered their own space travel prophet Zolotovskiy. More, they formed a committee for the exploration of the stratosphere and in 1925 this committee published a two-volume report on the use of rockets for stratosphere exploration.

In France one of France's pioneer aviators, Robert Esnault-Pelterie (holder of pilot licence No. 4) got together with a Paris banker Andre Hirsch and established an annual award for the publication, or piece of research work, which contributed most to the advance of space travel.

In America, in the meantime, Goddard got his first liquid fuel rocket off the ground.

JAMES IS. STRIKE THURSDAY

About 150 workers at the Canadian Industries Ltd. explosives plant on James Island will go on strike Thursday at 6 a.m.

Federal 128, Canadian Chemical and Explosives Workers, set the strike deadline this morning at a meeting here when the members rejected a company offer.

Chief issues in the prospective shutdown of B.C.'s only explosives plant are the union shop and three weeks' annual vacation after 10 instead of 15 years.

Union officials blamed the lack of agreement between the two sides on "C.I.L.'s policy of directing its negotiations from Montreal instead of allowing settlement to be reached by their B.C. representative as required under the Labor Relations Act."

Wolves Win, Boost Lead

LONDON (Reuters)—Wolverhampton Wanderers whipped Nottingham Forest 2-0 today and stretched their lead in the English soccer league's first division to three points.

The crowd literally supplied the fireworks in a game between Arsenal and Manchester City. The referee had to warn the crowd behind the Manchester City goal after several firecrackers were set off and then had to stop the game to repair the net at the Arsenal end. Arsenal won the game 2-1.

Lay Down in Snow For Self Destruction

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP)—A brilliant young scientist who died Monday night high on an Arctic glacier in northern Alaska was reported today to have lain down in the snow lightly clad "seeking self-destruction."

Dr. Richard C. Hubley's death was ascribed to suicide by Col. Howard E. Currie, commander of the Arctic aeromedical laboratory at Ladd Air Force base here.

Currie flew back to Fairbanks during the night with Hubley's frozen body.

Cloak and Dagger Aspect Develops in Sommers Case

NOW SHE BELONGS . . .

In the arms of the boy who became her brother Friday, this little girl slept peacefully through an eventful day that saw her adopted into a Victoria home.

For the young parents, it was a thrilling close to 1½ years of waiting. Young David, above, also is adopted. See story, Page 17.

BUILDING COLLAPSE KILLS 20

CAIRO (UP)—A seven-story apartment building in suburban Manial collapsed around its 150 sleeping occupants early today.

Reports placed casualty figures at 20 dead and scores injured.

Police said that "dozens more" probably had also perished.

Boat Burns Off Island, None Saved

SEATTLE (AP)—A large fishing vessel was destroyed by fire early today about 70 miles off the coast of Vancouver Island, and no survivors had been found by mid-day, coast guard headquarters here reported.

The fishboat, her superstructure burned and her hull aflame, was sighted by the Japanese freighter Meitetsu Maru.

The freighter radioed the coast guard rescue co-ordination centre that there was no sign of survivors, and an hour's search of the area was fruitless.

The freighter approached within 100 yards of the burning boat but was unable to identify her. The vessel was described as about 70 feet long, of 50 gross tons and painted white.

Weather conditions were good for searching the area.

Position of the burning vessel was described by Search and Rescue Centre, Vancouver, as due west of Cape Flattery and south of Ucluelet.

The Centre said reports from the Japanese freighter were fragmentary.

Two RCAF planes carried out a search early today and were later replaced by two U.S. Coast Guard aircraft out of Port Angeles.

The Canadian Department of Transport radio has asked all ships in the area to keep a lookout, but no private vessels have been specifically ordered to the scene.

Reports Hint Purge Of Red Army Officers

LONDON (AP)—Hints of a mass purge of Red Army officers who supported ousted Marshal Georgi Zhukov were reaching western observers today.

Several hundred senior Soviet army officers attended an eight-hour meeting in Moscow's Kremlin Friday when the future of the dismissed defence minister may have been discussed.

Stalin's Power Khrushchev Goal?

(From Times Wire Services)

WASHINGTON—Nikita Khrushchev's smashing victory over Marshal Georgi Zhukov could have ominous overtones for the future, officials here said today.

They said Khrushchev obviously has tightened his grip on the reins of Soviet power on a pattern set years ago by Joseph Stalin.

The big question here now is what Khrushchev will do with that power—if he can hold it.

Marshal Georgi Zhukov, dismissed as Soviet defence minister a week ago, has been removed from his posts in the Communist party hierarchy. It was announced today in Moscow.

He loses his membership of the party Praesidium, Russia's top executive body, and his place in the central committee, which shapes party policy, it was announced in a communiqué.

Zhukov, 60, was the first professional soldier ever to sit in the Praesidium. He was made a full member in July this year after serving for 16 months as a candidate non-voting member.

The central committee communiqué said Zhukov has been expelled from the two executive organs for opposing party decisions.

It repeated party chief Nikita Khrushchev's comment last Wednesday to reporters in Moscow that the marshal will be given a new job "according to his experience and qualifications."

But U.S. experts studying the Radio Withholds Interview 3 Days

The mystery of former Social Credit forests minister Robert Sommers assumed an almost cloak and dagger aspect within the last 24 hours following the announcement that Chief Justice Sloan, as a royal commission, will probe the truth or falsity of the charges he took bribes while serving in the government.

Up to now Sommers has managed to keep his movements a secret from the public since before he failed to appear in court last month to press his slander suit against lawyer David Sturdy.

Strangest development was the declaration by a local radio station that one of its commentators has tracked down Mr. Sommers and secured an exclusive taped interview with him, but will not present it to the public until Sunday night, at least four days since it was obtained.

A Vancouver radio station also claimed to have the interview which was "quite recent," but recorded before the announcement that Chief Justice Sloan would investigate the case.

It was presumed to be the same interview recorded by the Victoria commentator, but for reasons of exploitation is being withheld from the public until the Sunday night broadcast.

Meanwhile in Vancouver a newspaper, (The Province) claims to have discovered that Mr. Sommers has been living in Oregon and California for the last four months.

However it is believed he is now back in the interior of British Columbia where his riding is located.

The main question is: does Mr. Sommers intend to appear before the Sloan commission?

Previously Mrs. Sommers said she is confident her husband will return and take every step to clear his name.

Meanwhile, Chief Justice Gordon Sloan advised The Times today that the precise date for the start of the commission "was a matter to be discussed with counsel" and that the Nov. 12 date originally announced was merely tentative.

"It may be some time between Nov. 12 and 18," the Chief Justice said.

"I am going to Vancouver tomorrow to attend the Court of Appeal Tuesday, and expect to discuss the date with counsel."

"The hearings will be expeditious. It is difficult to say exactly how long they will last—perhaps two or three weeks, perhaps more."

GREEK LINER SINKING; 200 PASSENGERS ABOARD

LONDON (UP)—The 12,000-ton Greek liner Neptunia hit a submerged rock off Ireland tonight and was reported in danger of sinking.

First reports said the ship was carrying about 200 passengers.

Some were reported to have been taken ashore at Cobh, in Southern Ireland.

The Neptunia radioed an SOS that the rock ripped a gaping hole in its side. The message said water was rushing in and that the ship's engine room was rapidly filling with water.

Fleets of Russian Satellites Could Shower Arms Anywhere

OTTAWA (CP)—An expert on missiles and electronics says the Russians conceivably could put up fleets of earth satellites which could drop weapons anywhere the Soviets chose.

He also suggests that satellites might be used to render useless by electronic means any defence against the intercontinental ballistic missile.

The expert is Group Capt. C. B. Limbrick, recently retired from the RCAF. He was director of the air force's guided missiles and special weapons branch and also director of radio warfare.

He makes his comments in the most recent issue of the monthly Canadian trade journal, Aircraft.

Group Capt. Limbrick says the use of radiating electronic devices such as radar successful during most of the Second World War has been drastically limited by the development of powerful electronic counter-measures.

North America's three aircraft warning networks—the DEW (distant early warning) radar line, the mid-Canada chain and the Pinetree system—are all radiating electronic devices.

Group Capt. Limbrick says the intercontinental ballistic missile—the Russians claim to have test-fired one successfully—can be controlled with non-radiating electronic devices.

But "to the best of my knowledge the only way to detect and track an intercontinental ballistic missile would be by devices that radiate."

"Obviously, such installations can be located, and should suitable equipment be developed, counter-measures. Here then we have the uncomfortable situation of a quiet enemy and a noisy defence; i.e., the attacker is not vulnerable to electronic interference and the defence is."

Group Capt. Limbrick says operation of the earth satellite will give the Russians the first authentic information of flight and control problems in outer space and new data on temperature, pressure functioning of electronic devices and power requirements.

All these would be of "tremendous value" in development and operation of intercontinental ballistic missiles.

Group Capt. Limbrick says every possible effort must be made in the application of science and invention to defence and that the gap between military requirements and delivery of the equipment must be closed.

Wonderin' where th' Sommers gone seems t' be a permanent occupation in these parts:

ground (1926) but did not make the news public, probably feeling that a range of 184 feet was not impressive enough.

In Germany, a number of people who had corresponded with Oerth had decided that the next step had to be experimentation. This meant money and it was thought that the best way of raising money for experimentation was to found a society. The Society for Space Travel, Inc., was officially registered in 1927, and after some preliminaries Oerth became its president and I became its vice-president.

A few years later, G. Edward Pendray and David Lasser formed the American Interplanetary Society in New York; it was later renamed American Rocket Society and is now the largest society of professional rocket men, with 8,000 members.

A British Interplanetary Society was founded a year or two after the American

... SPACE

Rocket Society. It is now the second largest of the rocket societies. George Bernard Shaw was one of its members.

The German Society for Space Travel had experimentation as its goal and even knew where to begin. The first job was to develop a device which was called the rocket motor. The liquid fuel rockets as envisaged by Oerth were to burn a liquid fuel, such as gasoline, with liquid oxygen. To do this both liquids had to be fed separately into a combustion chamber and ignited at the instant of mixing.

Since this was something that had never been done before, quite a number of things went wrong. Valves froze shut and refused to open (or to close) at the proper moment. Rocket motors blew up with a noise like an exploding hand grenade. Once in a while they worked. It was evidently just a question of plugging, if we did it often enough we would learn how to do it right.

Flame From Rocket Motor a Problem

One major problem was the flame often burned its way out of the rocket motor. A cooling jacket full of cold water helped. In the end we had a nice rocket motor made of aluminum, which was reasonably reliable. When visitors asked how we called it we had to disappoint them. That was the motor, period.

Oh, yes, privately we called it "the egg." That was its shape and it was about the size of a goose egg.

Trouble with the egg was that it usually burned up, even with cooling water, after a 30-second run. But 30 seconds was enough to push rockets into the sky for half a mile or so, and visitors were greatly impressed when a cute little white parachute jumped out at the peak of the flight and lowered the rocket to the ground.

Naturally there were endless technical discussions. Would the egg stand up longer if some cooling water were injected into it? Could we circulate the cooling water through the cooling jacket first and then inject it?

Well, why not circulate the fuel through the cooling jacket? Our chief experimenter, Klaus Riedel, tried it with gasoline and promptly blew up a motor.

Fuel Combination Pays Off

I suggested then, for theoretical reasons, to repeat it and try it with ethyl alcohol as a fuel, with some water added for bulk. It worked beautifully. The egg, running on ethyl alcohol and circulating the fuel through the cooling jacket first, became the forerunner of all of the large rocket motors to come.

The German V-2 rockets used this principle and this fuel combination, the later American Viking rockets did and so did the rocket propelled research airplanes X-1 and X-1A.

One of the rocket societies which started then was one in Austria and its secretary, the engineer Guido, Baron von Pirquet began to develop a philosophy of rocket development which had been lacking.

First, he wrote, the rockets would be purely experimental. The first practical step would be the instrument-carrying rocket which Goddard had in mind. These would grow in size and the largest instrument carriers might be used for ultra-rapid mail transportation.

The mail rockets would grow in size, too, until they were large enough to carry a pilot and to leave the atmosphere. They would be the first space ships but their first job would be to build a station in space, a manned artificial satellite.

Baron von Pirquet's scheme (1929) still did not contain a missile, as may have been noticed.

INDIAN AFFAIRS PROBE GETS BACKING OF PAULL

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP)—Andrew Paull, president of the North American Indian Brotherhood, said Friday he agrees with Frank Calder, former Atlin MLA that there should be an investigation into the operation of the Indian Affairs Department.

Mr. Calder advocated the move in a letter to the Indian leader, in which he charged that the department has been lax in its administration, mainly because its personnel does not understand Indian problems.

Mr. Paull said Friday he has conferred with the government concerning an investigation and "the next move is up to them."

He said he does not anticipate any action until next spring.

It's a fishy tale but if the fun is finny it is certainly first-class audience bait.

Produced by the Peninsula Players at Sidney Elementary School, Friday night, "Miranda" netted a hearty response from a good-sized audience.

A truly incredible tale, its effectiveness depends on lightness and fast tempo from start to finish. Split-second timing on cues and business must be the order of the night.

This effect was captured at moments but on the whole, possibly due to nerves, some members of the cast slowed up proceedings with memory lapses.

This aspect will no doubt improve tonight when the play will be repeated.

Herring Fishermen Relax Strike Boycott

VANCOUVER (CP)—Striking British Columbia herring fishermen have agreed to relax their boycott of company operations in order to ensure Canada's entry into the Red China salt herring market.

Homer Stevens, secretary of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union, said Friday an exception would be made in the cases of two firms. The fisheries association and union have signed an agreement providing for extension of all the terms and conditions of the old agreement to cover salt herring operations at Francis Miller and Co. Ltd. and Nelson Brothers Fisheries Ltd.

The companies will be permitted to operate two herring boats each, the fish to be used only for canning or salting for the duration of the strike.

Stevens said China had once been a good market for B.C.'s salt herring, but "refusal to recognize China and the U.S.

Polio Cases For Year Down 249

OTTAWA (CP)—Eight persons were hit by polio in Canada during the week ended Oct. 26, compared with two the previous week the health department reported today.

Total number of polio cases recorded so far this year, however, was only 249, compared with 498 in the corresponding period last year.

Thirteen deaths were reported in Canada to Oct. 26, half the 1956 total.

The eight new cases were reported in Ontario and Alberta—four in each province.

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Former president Truman charged Friday night that President Eisenhower was "agonizingly slow" to sense the new danger posed by the successful launching of a Russian satellite.

"And when made aware of it," Truman said, "He was slow to do what he ought to do."

In a speech peppered with scorn for the administration, particularly with reference to national defence and foreign affairs, the ex-president told a Jefferson-Jackson Day banquet audience:

"While the Russians were demonstrating their scientific advances, the administration was actually issuing secret orders cutting down on basic research in the defence establishment."

"These are serious blunders, shocking in the lack of judgment, imperilling our country's safety."

Increased Pension Cheques This Month

The Progressive Conservative government's proposals for higher social security payments will cost the federal treasury an estimated $105,000,000 a year.

That is the aggregate of estimates given Friday by Health Minister Monteith for $9-a-month increases in old age security pensions and in maximum payments for old age assistance, blindness and disability allowances.

The new payment level would be $55 a month, up from $46 set last spring by the previous administration. The new increases would be effective as of Friday, with first payments at the end of this month.

Spokesmen for all opposition groups welcomed the proposed increases, but CCF and Social Credit members said the government was not generous.

Expect Fund To Be Farther in Red

The old age security fund is financed by special 2-per-cent tax levies on personal and corporation income and on sales. Its customary deficits have been made up from the federal treasury and this year's double increase is expected to put the fund farther into the red.

Mr. Monteith gave no indication whether the government plans any changes in the method of financing the fund.

The programs of old age assistance to the 65-69 age group, and blindness and disability allowances all are jointly financed by the federal and provincial governments. They go only to the needy, based on a means test.

Number of Recipients Boosted

Mr. Monteith said increases in permissive income ceilings for old age assistance will boost the number of recipients to 95,000 from 90,000. The ceiling—including pension—would rise by $120 a year to $960 for single persons and by $240 to $1,620 for married recipients.

Similar increases in the other two programs would boost the number of recipients of blindness allowances to 9,000 from 8,300 and of disability allowances to 36,000 from 29,000.

Scottie Bryce (CCF, Selkirk) said disability allowances should be extended to those who are able to feed and dress themselves but are unable to work. This class of disabled now is excluded.

Hon. Paul Martin, former Liberal health minister, said that when the Conservatives were in opposition they vigorously denounced the means test for blind persons. But he noted now that they are in office they do not propose to eliminate the means test.

Mr. Monteith said the question of the means test would have to be taken up with the provinces before any action could be proposed to Parliament.

Party lines were crossed Friday during debate on a private member's bill to list party affiliations of candidates on federal election ballots.

Ray Thomas (SC, Wetaskiwin), the bill's sponsor, said it is needed to avoid confusion, especially where a party with little chance of winning picked a candidate with a name similar or identical to the name of the candidate they hoped to defeat.

State Secretary Fairclough opposed the measure. But members of the Liberal and CCF parties differed among themselves on its merits and the bill did not come to a vote in the hour set aside for private members' bills.

No Early Recognition Of Reds Says John D.

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Diefenbaker said Friday there would be no justification for Canadian diplomatic recognition of Communist China until the Peiping government "explains its wrong-doings under international law."

He said in the Commons that there was no intention "in the immediate foreseeable future" to recognize the Peiping government.

The question arose after Trade Minister Churchill outlined plans for Canada's trade commissioner at Hong Kong, C. M. Forsyth-Smith, to make "an exploratory trip" into Red China starting Tuesday.

Mr. Churchill said that last year Communist China imported only $2,400,000 worth of Canadian goods, mostly fertilizer. The coming visit would determine whether it was possible to extend trade in wheat, flour, paper, pulp, lumber and fish. He emphasized Canada would sell only non-strategic materials.

Mr. Diefenbaker said there is nothing inconsistent in trying to extend trade with a country while not giving diplomatic recognition.

Claude Ellis (CCF, Regina) said Mr. Diefenbaker apparently was arguing that diplomatic recognition would imply approval. How did that square with Canada's recognition of the Soviet Union?

Speaker Roland Michener ruled the question out of order as being argumentative. There was no further questioning of Mr. Diefenbaker's statement.

MRS. GEORGE BLACK

First Lady of Yukon Mrs. Black Dies

WHITEHORSE, Y.T. (CP) — Mrs. George Black, who enjoyed a career which led from a wealthy United States home to the rugged gold camps of the Yukon, died at her home here Friday following a long illness. She was 91.

The first lady of the Yukon for many years, Mrs. Black, wife of the former House of Commons Speaker, was the third woman to sit in the Canadian Parliament.

She sat as an Independent Conservative member for the Yukon from 1935 to 1940, the only term between 1921 and 1949 that her husband, because of illness didn't represent the constituency.

P.M.'s TRIBUTE

Prime Minister Diefenbaker said, "It is with profound sorrow that I learn of the death of Mrs. Black, one of the great ladies of the far northwest of our times."

"By her courage and daring in pioneer times, her faithfulness to the Parliament of Canada as a member of the House of Commons, and by her energy, wit and sincerity, she made a contribution to this country rarely equalled by any other woman."

Always looking for adventure, she landed in Dawson July 4, 1897, after the arduous trek from Skagway, Alaska, where she was one of 200 women among 2,000 men.

MP AT 70

Her career also took her overseas to work among Canadian troops in the First World War and only a few weeks before her 70th birthday, to the House of Commons to represent the

RCAF Eyes Use Of U.S. Missile

OTTAWA (CP) — The RCAF is studying the possibility of putting into operation the American Bomarc, a supersonic, unmanned interceptor, it was learned Friday.

It is understood that the new integrated North American air defence command at Colorado Springs, Colo., comprising RCAF and United States Air Force officers, has recommended to the Canadian government that Bomarc bases be established in Canada.

However, no decision has been reached. Bomarc bases require a complex and costly ground control system.

IN PRODUCTION

The Boeing Aircraft Co. of Seattle now is producing the Bomarc in operational numbers for the U.S. Air Force. The pilotless guided missile reportedly can seek out and shoot down planes at great distances and heights from its ground launching site.

Disclosure that the RCAF is studying adoption of the Bomarc was the first firm indication that the air force intends to get into the field of ground-to-air missiles.

Whether it will or not is another question. The government has not yet come to grips with the problem of whether the RCAF or the army will be responsible for the long-range ground-to-air guided missiles.

Defence Minister Pearkes announced earlier this week that the government has decided to continue development work for at least another year on the supersonic jet Arrow and the Sparrow air-to-air guided missile to arm it. The Arrow, being developed by Avro Aircraft Ltd., Malton, Ont., has not yet been flown.

Armed Forces at Peak Strength

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's armed forces are at their highest personnel strength in peacetime history.

A defence department spokesman said Friday total strength reached 118,505 at Sept. 30, last date for which complete figures are available.

The breakdown by services:

RCAF, 51,909; army, 47,200; navy, 19,396.

The air force has shot through its manpower ceiling of 51,000, but officials stressed that this ceiling is flexible and that the RCAF still will need about 7,000 recruits next year to replace men who will return to civvy street.

The navy manpower ceiling is set at 20,000 and the army's at 49,000.

Armed forces personnel strength has been around 117,000 since 1954. It began to rise noticeably earlier this year. The intake in September was 2,332 persons.

We are living in an age of "auto-matic." Transmissions for our cars and appliances by the dozen are largely automatic in the sense that the owner has to do little or nothing to run his pet gadgetry through a set course of performance.

With cameras the nearest we have to an automatic is the simple, unheralded workhorse of the picture-taking world—the box camera. The user of a box camera doesn't bother with lens or shutter adjustments, focusing is usually the least of his troubles as long as he stays fairly well within prescribed distances, and aperture is merely a word which gives him trouble only when he tries to spell it.

This is all very good because the box camera is a marvel of compromise and concession, designed strictly to provide highly acceptable snapshots to the army of now-and-then snapshotters who have neither the time nor the inclination to get very far into the intricacies of photography. Come to think of it, we have a number of mighty interesting box camera models at JUS-RITE PHOTOS LTD. Can you—quite like—name a better gift for the youngsters (and oldsters) on your Christmas list? Seriously, some of the better-made box cameras, priced as low as $1.99, are gifts bound to provide many years of enjoyment. See them at JUS-RITE PHOTOS LTD., 716 Yates St. today. Phone 4-1612.

What About Combines?

AMONG THE MANY HARD issues facing the Diefenbaker Government none is harder than that presented by a recent report of the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission.

This report finds that a price-fixing combine exists in the manufacture of metal culverts. To be sure, culverts used for road drainage purposes are not a large item in the national economy, though they represent substantial costs to all our governments, but the combine in their manufacture presents a large test of the new Government's attitude toward combines generally.

Under the former Liberal Government and its minister of justice, Mr. Garson, many combines were tracked down, brought into court and punished. The struggle against combines (though like the struggle against evil generally it is never entirely won) remained an unshakable policy of Liberalism.

When the Conservative Party was last in office, between 1930 and 1935, it did not discover or prosecute a single combine. Historically the Conservative Party has been much more lenient with combines than the Liberal Party.

The doctrine that some combines are bad and some good is widely accepted among Conservative leaders; whereas Liberal Governments have regarded all combines in restraint of trade as bad and have made them illegal by increasingly drastic legislation.

This legislation, in its present form, was questioned on constitutional grounds before the Supreme Court last spring when certain paper companies, convicted of combining, attacked the existing law as invalid.

The Supreme Court upheld the law in every aspect.

Today, therefore, we have a law of unquestionable validity and a report from the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission declaring that a combine exists in the case of the metal culvert industry.

Undoubtedly if this report had come to Mr. Garson he would have taken steps to dissolve the combine through the courts if necessary.

It will be said by his critics that Mr. Garson did not move, last spring, to prevent the threatened formation of combines in the sugar and beer industries.

But when the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission reported on impending changes in these industries the whole structure of the anti-combines law was already challenged in the courts. The Government did not know then whether the law was constitutional, on May 13, the election campaign already was under way and in all this confusion Mr. Garson, wisely or unwisely, postponed action.

Now the Diefenbaker Government must declare itself, not on some suspected or impending act of business combination, but on an existing combine as formally disclosed by the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission. The Government's action, or lack of action, in this case will reveal at once its whole thinking about combines.

If the Government believes that some combines are bad and some good, if it is prepared to alter the whole basis of the present law, then it must introduce new legislation. In common honesty it cannot leave the present legislation on the statute books and merely wink at its violation.

Pointing the Way

FEW VICTORIANS VIEWING the published sketches of the projected civic centre on Cathedral Hill could have failed to receive a thrill of pleasure at the scope of the proposal. The well-placed buildings, the open spaces and the planned vista revealing the facade of the Cathedral comprise a program that could bring a wealth of architectural beauty to this community which at present has little to boast of in this department. The Capital Region Planning Board is to be congratulated on this imaginative proposal.

It may well be that further suggestions will improve details of the project. With that there should be no quarrel. But the overall plan will have wide appeal and it is to be hoped that it will eventually be carried through to completion.

Here, on one commanding site with an unparalleled southern and western prospect, would be gathered the city hall, the courthouse, the land registry office and other suitable buildings. As presented, the centre would incorporate the nearby Cathedral, in its attractive, tree setting, and the serene beauty of Pioneer Square.

While a little removed from the hub of the business district, the location would have the advantage of providing off-street parking facilities—a feature not available in the crowded streets surrounding the present courthouse and city hall.

The same factor of accessibility would still apply in the event that other municipalities amalgamate with Victoria at a later date. For the vast majority of Saanich residents, for instance, the Cathedral Hill site would be much more convenient than Royal Oak.

As clearly shown in the sketches, however, the project comprises much more than a mere assemblage of public buildings. It would provide a worthy man-made adjunct to the many scenic beauties with which nature has endowed this community but which so often we have failed to emulate.

Drugstore Cowboy's Lament

IT COMES WITH A SLIGHT shock to read, in our effete southern environment, a news item telling of a $500 reward for cattle rustlers in the Bald Hill range 175 miles east of Prince Rupert. This surely must be an item that has strayed off some television screen or double-feature movie program and found its way into the news columns.

As we read of searchers finding the "tracks of a shod saddle horse" on the range trail it all seems like something we saw in a dark room last week when good guys and bad guys staged their inevitable struggle.

But the illusion of an old-time western is shattered in the next line. Also found, we read, were "tracks of a one-ton jeep, in which it is believed a yearling steer and a yearling heifer were carried away."

Alas for a dying tradition. The fleeing scoundrels may still "go that-a-way," but no longer will we "cut 'em off at the fork." It's at the corner gas station that we'll cut them off, and we'll frisk them for their driver's licences, not their six-guns.

It's all pretty prosaic now and sad. Automation has come west of the Pecos, and even into the British Columbia hinterland.

After 40 Years

By K. C. THALER, UP London

RUSSIA'S Communist regime nears the 40th anniversary of the October revolution Nov. 7 drunk with its newly gained and awe-inspiring world power, but clearly in the throes of a fresh internal struggle for supreme leadership.

Looking back over this eventful 40 years, the regime can boast of having taken Russia a long way since a handful of old Bolsheviks stormed the Czarist winter palace on that grey fall day in 1917.

The 40 years of Communist rule have witnessed one of the most spectacular drives in modern history. They have seen some world shaking events and some of the most surprising achievements—some of them launched on a sea of blood and human agony.

Russia, which 40 years ago lay prostrate and dismembered after years of bloodletting in First World War, today stands as one of the world's two military colossi, rivalling the United States for military might and aspiring at overtaking her economically.

Her expansionism dwarfs Western empire building of modern history, with her tentacles stretched deep into Europe and Asia.

More Than One-Third

Communist regimes, many of them still looking to Moscow for guidance, now control more than one-third of the world's total population.

Blood, starvation, wholesale extermination, degradation of human rights have been among the stepping stones to success.

For years, the Russian people themselves had to endure the grimness of Josef Stalin's dictatorship with its purges and concentration camps. His death brought the first glimpses of a better life. Today they are again faced by the uncertainties of a newly tightening regime.

Thus 40 years after the revolution Russia stands provocatively as challenger of the United States, with the launching of the first satellite into outer space as the crowning result of her efforts.

But she too has her problems. They centre around internal rifts, cracks in the seams of the expanded Soviet empire, the challenge to her ideological leadership and the emergence of "national communism" among her satellites.

In the distance looms the rising star of Red China as a future challenger for Communist leadership. Today, China is an ally. Whether that will last when China is no longer economically dependent on Russia, no one can say.

Russia's most recent gain has been growing influence in the Middle East.

Continued Crises

A series of crises has rocked the Soviet Union in its 40-year history, each crisis seemingly more severe than the last, many threatening to deal the regime the coup de grace.

It was shaken by Allied intervention in the early years, then famines, economic crises, purges and bloodletting among the leaders and, worst of all, the Nazi invasion in 1941 which appeared to seal the doom of the Communist state until the dramatic turning point at Stalingrad.

The past four decades have also seen the destruction of Russia's once powerful middle and upper classes, the annihilation of the opposition, the liquidation of the Kulaks and the collectivization of agriculture and the emergence of a tight, all-powerful and all-controlling "monolithic" party apparatus.

Soviet affairs experts, reviewing the 40 years of Soviet revolution, point to these outstanding developments in the prominent fields of Russian life:

Annexations in East Europe since the war and political domination of the satellites have brought between 100 million and 150 million of formerly independent people under Moscow's domination.

Power Politics

The Communist bloc today counts some 950 million people, out of the world's total of two and a half billion. Power politics, brutal annexations, infiltration, subversion and broken pledges have been favorite weapons in this march.

More recently the regime has embarked successfully on the lure of "economic aid" promises for its infiltration policies in the Middle East and in Asia.

The Soviet "co-existence" line has proved a useful cover for cold conquest through a shrewd mixture of political, military and economic blackmail.

With some 175 divisions, armed to the teeth with modern weapons and tens of thousands of tanks, an air force of between 15,000 and 20,000 planes, and a vast submarine fleet of between 350 and 400 vessels including long-range types, Russia today is the most powerful military power in Europe and Asia. She rivals the United States in these fields and may surpass her in some.

But what is more alarming is her apparently startling advance in the field of rockets and missiles.

Concerning the Id and the Idiots

IT would be better, it seems to me, if the advertising experts had left our minds alone. Now, I am not just sure what an id is but it looks pretty unpleasant when indecently exposed by what the propaganda industry calls Motivational Research, or MR.

According to a learned piece in Harper's Bazaar, as condensed in the Reader's Digest, MR has gone a lot further than one suspected. It has gone much too far. It is turning the ordinary, healthy North American citizen into nothing but a psychopathic case and a list of ugly symptoms.

Hutchison

Thus we learn, for example, that the automobile industry has appropriated the sex appeal which formerly belonged exclusively to the garment and movie industries.

In Detroit, it appears, the makers of cars are grappling with a grave problem known as "Mistress versus Wife," which is familiar enough in Hollywood but, at first sight, does not seem to involve a hunk of cold metal on wheels. But wait.

Car dealers, we are told, had long realized that a convertible on display drew the male customer into the showroom. The dealers also knew, however, that he usually ended by choosing a mere four-door sedan. Why? What was wrong with the customer's id?

THE convertible, say the Motivational Research experts, has "associations of youth and adventure." It is the symbol of a mistress, not a wife. The sedan, on the other hand, is the girl a man marries because she will make a good wife and mother.

This explanation is really bringing love, both sacred and profane, up to date. It is introducing mechanics into marriage. It is raising human intelligence up to the high level of the machine, and nothing could be higher.

Well, the automobile people solved the conflict between wife and mistress with a brilliant stroke. They invented the hardtop car which combines the permanent, respectable appeal of family life with the allure of an assignation. A perfect combination.

The husband's craving for romance is satisfied quite innocently. The wife is no longer jealous of the mistress. And the family has a good car.

ALL this, no doubt, is a valuable service to society. The hardtop prevents the disruption of domestic life. The mechanical love affair is purely Platonic.

There is only one slight disadvantage in MR's great discovery—it reduces the human person, in the estimate of commerce, to the level of a subnormal child. It explores our id and concludes that we are idiots.

This may be a correct conclusion—there are many exhibits in the world to support it these days—but it is not flattering. Why, it may even drive some men in desperation and rebellion into the arms and leather cushions of a convertible.

GAIN, the MR researchers have discovered why men smoke cigars. I had supposed, as one who hates cigars, that men smoked them because they enjoyed them but I had overestimated the intelligence and morals of my sex.

No, the cigar business is booming in America because women hate cigars and men enjoy torturing their wives. Or, as an MR executive puts it in an elegant phrase, the husband "knows he is going to stink up the room."

By thus asserting his masculine power, the man flatters and annoys his wife. This is a useful revelation. One had always wondered why men smoked cigars.

'In Memory Of' May Mean a Distant View

From The Times (London)

DESCENT from ancestors who came over with the Conqueror used to be the ace in the hands of claimants to blue blood. Now a gentleman in Australia trumps it. Like Will Rogers, he says that his ancestors met the boat. He can show full kinship with King Harold.

What more natural, then, than that he should have remembered the anniversary, the other day, of the Battle of Hastings? He was not content to keep it as one of those secret anniversaries of the heart.

Pardonably proud of his lineage, he spent good money on inserting an advertisement in the Sydney Morning Herald which read, "Godwinson, Harold, King of England, killed in action near Hastings, Oct. 14, 1066. Mourning by Godwin, Edmund, Magnus and Ulf."

For the benefit of such readers as may have forgotten, he has helpfully added that the four mourners were sons of the deceased commander-in-chief. He also added that he is sick of the romanticists and wants to get back to the good old days of mead and honey. Here he seems to have done himself less than justice. For what could be more romantic than to revive in public the memory of one's forbear who had died, however gloriously, nearly 900 years ago?

But it is hard to see why he has roused the wrath of some of his fellow citizens who are reported to have objected to his notice being put under the heading "On Active Service." Surely that is a fair enough account of poor Harold with the arrow in his eye.

Maybe the objectors believe in the legend, borrowed by Kipling, that the King survived the battle. But, more probably, they were taking up the traditional Anglo-Saxon attitude of being bored when faraway things are raked up. Herein they differ from many of our neighbors.

A long list of famous figures in French and German history might be made none of whom could prudently be lauded in newspapers which like a quiet life. But why did so many people bombard the Sydney office with telephone calls? Protesting telephone calling and letter writing has a strong minority appeal that always seems odd to those of us who are too tolerant or too lazy ever to think of indulging in it.

Our English climate is evidently milder in this matter of long distance commemoration. Richard III was "deeply mourned" as, among other things, a "gentleman" in the Personal Columns of The Times a year or so ago and, in the same place after a decent interval, a "descendant" remembered the birth of "a gallant Welshman" who saved England from the tyranny of Richard III.

Who knows if some proud possessor of Norman blood is not now busy at his typewriter in Sydney? That would make a happy ending—but not a complete precedent for a certain centenary to be celebrated next September. Irish papers please note. They will be wise to return any cheques coming with a proposed announcement on the lines of "In memory of a great Englishman, Oliver Cromwell."

We Perform Under the Spur of Fear What We Should Have Done in Wisdom

By HON. LESTER B. PEARSON. (Copyright 1957. All rights reserved)

TWO leaders of the democratic world, President Eisenhower and Prime Minister Macmillan, met in Washington last week. Two leaders of the Communist world, Secretary Khrushchev and Marshal Zhukov, presumably met in Moscow about the same time on the latter's return from a visit to Yugoslavia.

The two meetings must have been as dissimilar in atmosphere and result as the systems of government represented by the participants. The Moscow encounter—it can be assumed—was conspiratorial, secret, and its outcome at the time this is being written is still shrouded in mystery.

The Washington meeting was cordial, frank and its results have been made public to be assessed by every citizen, praised or condemned as he sees fit, without anyone sending him to Siberia—or Outer Mongolia.

The reaffirmation at the Washington talks of Anglo-American friendship; the emphasis placed on interdependence as the guiding principle of international policy; the renewal of the pledges so often given to consult and co-operate fully, all these are to the good.

They are especially to be welcomed as strengthening the ties between the two countries after the strains that had been imposed on them by the discord and divisions over the Suez some months ago.

The cause of peace suffers whenever there is disunity between London and Washington. It is then that Canadians, in particular, shiver with apprehension for they are involved in a very special and distressing dilemma whenever there is serious trouble between their mother country and their neighbor.

It is also heartening to learn from the Washington discussions that the two governments realized that the area of renewed and strengthened co-operation must be wider than the boundaries of their two countries and that its spirit and its measures should extend beyond the needs of military defence.

The visit, then, to Washington—and the time spent in Ottawa on the way back by the United Kingdom party—has been fruitful. But it will only create subsequent misunderstanding and disappointment if we exaggerate its significance in terms of early and concrete accomplishment.

Any such temptation to read too much into the Declaration of Interdependence issued in Washington on Oct. 26 should be lessened by the recollection that only last March the two governments recognized at Bermuda the same necessity to co-ordinate their policies in the interest of this interdependence.

I do not, in any way, wish to depreciate the value of the Washington meeting. It was timely and important.

But it is one thing—as I should know from experience—to give expression in communiques and press interviews to the highest and best principles of national and international conduct. It is something else—and far more difficult—to agree on, and put into effect, the procedures and policies that are necessary to implement those principles.

There is a good example of this difficulty in the Washington declaration of last week where the two governments advocate the combining of resources and the sharing of tasks between themselves in particular and the NATO countries in general, more especially in the field of scientific research and development.

However, as the President himself noted, this will require an amendment by Congress of the U.S. Atomic Energy Act. Presidents propose but Congress disposes. So, we should keep our fingers hopelessly crossed on this pronouncement.

We should also remember that this particular proposal is not new. It has been made at NATO more than once in the past.

Only a year ago the NATO committee of three on non-military co-operation, of which I was a member, had a section in its report devoted to scientific and technical cooperation and made certain concrete recommendations to this end.

The recommendations were accepted by the NATO council, but without any great show of interest, and so far as I know, nothing has yet been done to implement them. There was no ardent desire exhibited at that time by those most directly concerned to share scientific knowledge and experience.

Now, however, an almost feverish emphasis is being placed on the necessity for such co-operation, such sharing, and we are told that something simply must be done about it, and quickly.

What has brought about the change? The answer is easy. It is Khrushchev and Sputnik, who have driven us into action.

Once again the West is reacting against a Russian move when it should have acted positively and in its own interests much earlier. Once again the West is doing something in the climate and under the impetus of conflict which it should have done sooner because it was a wise and constructive thing to do.

The very formation of NATO shows what I mean. It might have been the creative result of our desire to build up an Atlantic community dedicated to peaceful co-operation; to our conviction that today national sovereignty is not enough and national boundaries too limited.

In actual fact it was a defensive reaction—and a necessary one—to aggressive moves of the Soviet Union against Czechoslovakia. It was founded in fear, as we know justifiable fear, and on our need for collective security.

It is also being maintained far too largely by fear. Indeed, Stalin and Khrushchev have done more to hold NATO together than all the resolutions passed, or the communiques issued by the council since its first meeting.

I hope that when the shock of Sputnik has been forgotten—the determination to make NATO co-operation far more effective and its unity more real will also not be forgotten. I hope that we will not require another shock before we decide once again to do the things we should be doing without shock.

Best Laid Plans

THE Court House Seagull has been looking dreadfully dejected ever since the Capital Region Planning Board released its thoughts on the development of Cathedral Hill.

"Did you see, their idea of a court house?" he croaked. "Cor!" It's worse than my most dreadful dreams!"

"Why? It did look a bit like an ice cube, but there's nothing remarkable about that. Remember, this is 1957; the age of progress is with us. Severity is the thing."

"I had hoped," and the old bird wiped a tear from his beady eye. "I had hoped, at least, for several external features which seagulls have come to regard as their right. Windowsills. Flagpoles. Skylights. No sign of 'em."

"Did you look at the model?"

"Not too closely, those planners threw me out," and he cheered up a bit as he revealed the frenzied chase in which drafting tables were overturned, papers scattered, stenographers terrorized and the director's landing net torn. "Lost a couple of tail feathers," he continued, with a rueful backward glance, "but it was worth it. That model's got a more realistic appearance than it had."

"I hear the Cathedral pigeons are in favor of the plan."

"By no means unanimously. I spoke at their meeting last Tuesday, and while some

(the young and giddy ones mostly) thought there would be more roosting space around, the old guard wanted eaves and sills at least. They have drawn up a memorial to the Government insisting on flying buttresses, mullions, battlements, corbels and gargoyles, and hope to enlist the support of the Dean and Chapter."

"This is all most interesting. You could say, then, that the birds are presenting a united front?"

"By and large, yes. After all, as I pointed out to the pigeons, a new Court House is strictly (or at least, partly) for the birds, and their requirements should be considered. We have already struck a committee to consider the advisability of appointing a delegation to approach the Governor's ducks with a view to making representations to the appropriate authorities. I am not authorized to make any further statement at this time."

"Who is on the committee?"

"That is a matter of policy, and the names will be announced in due course."

"When will it meet and where?"

"No comment."

"Just a minute. You're only approaching the Government, not forming it."

"I have nothing to say at this time, except that we shall see. One has to keep one's hand in, you know."

"Of course, excuse me. But when can the public expect a statement about the proposed Court House?"

"The matter is receiving our earnest consideration, and an announcement will be made in due time. At the moment, there are several projects of major importance which have a higher priority, such as the Kelowna Bridge and the—ah, yes! The garbage scow! I see it is just leaving port!"

And away he flew, still muttering "No comment."

Grey-Faced Premier

(From The Vancouver Sun)

By ALEX YOUNG

VICTORIA—Through the window behind Premier Bennett's desk you could see that night had almost blotted out the day.

And through the often cloudy window that is Premier Bennett's face, you could see darkness descend inside a man who felt disillusionment and, possibly, betrayal.

For this was the moment that all experienced political reporters knew for months had to come.

It was time for Premier Bennett to admit to the world, to his own ambitious, righteous and stubborn self, that he had been wrong.

That he had been wrong in ignoring allegations that his one-time lands and forests minister, Robert E. Sommers, was a grafter.

That he had been wrong in accepting the advice of his attorney-general, Robert Bonner, that the charges against Sommers were "far-fetched."

He was finally admitting, after nearly two years, that perhaps the government was morally obliged to find out if there was any truth in the charges against Sommers.

During the 20 minutes of his late Thursday press conference, held to announce the government decision, the premier attempted to hold a cheerful countenance.

He is expert at this; he is skillful at concealing his true feelings with a mobile, hale and hearty face.

But Thursday the effort was just too much for this master politician.

As he read his prepared statement, Mr. Bennett was only moderately grave. In fact, he even smiled a few times.

But then came the questions . . . Reporters suggested through their queries that the premier was holding Mr. Bonner responsible for any blunders that might have been made.

"Do you consider the attorney-general erred in the first place, when he refused to act on the evidence 23 months ago?" I asked.

Faced with such questions in the past, Mr. Bennett had consistently leaped to Mr. Bonner's defence.

"Why, he's the finest young attorney-general Canada ever had," he would say. But not Thursday.

His face became unbelievably sad. His chin lowered to his chest. His eyes turned into two hard black agates. In low, measured tones he said:

"My friend, the attorney-general is the attorney-general and the government has acted on his recommendations."

When it came to Sommers, and where he now stood as a member of the Legislature, Premier Bennett showed similar feelings.

At the time lawyer David Sturdy first made his allegations before the Sloan Forestry Commission, Sommers was pulled out of a cabinet meeting by reporters and he issued a blanket denial.

The premier backed him up with the question, "Well, what does the minister say?" When told, he said, "That's it. That's it."

And during the 1956 general election campaign, Mr. Bennett said Sommers was going to get a decision from the "highest court in the land"—the electorate. With no evidence, the electorate of Rossland-Trail returned Mr. Sommers.

The premier was clearly wearied of his defensive role Thursday between 5 and 5.20 p.m.

What about Sommers, the MLA?

Mr. Bennett didn't say so with words, but his demeanor showed he no longer wished to talk about a man who had cast a shadow over his government. Grey-faced, he rose and in a tired voice, said:

"I don't want to discuss anything like that now."

TV Star in Making Says Critic of Queen

LONDON (Reuters) — Lord Altrincham Friday criticized the speeches made by the Queen at Washington airport when she was greeted by President Eisenhower and her later, speech at the Washington Press Club.

The 33-year-old peer, who last August described the Sovereign's style of speech as a "pain in the neck," offered praise, however, for the Queen's television appearance in Canada.

Altrincham expressed his view in his National and English Review, in which he made his first criticism of the monarchy.

In Canada, he said, the Queen showed "every sign of being a television star in the making," even if she did not say a few words off the cuff.

Moon Landing Poses Tricky Legal Issue

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dr. Norman MacKenzie, president of the University of British Columbia, says it will be a long time before any nation will be able to lay legal claim to the moon.

Dr. MacKenzie, a former legal adviser to the International Labor Office at Geneva, and regarded as one of Canada's leading experts in international law, said here it is not sufficient just to land on the moon to take possession of the satellite.

He said "possession and control" was the only way a nation could lay claim to the moon.

The question arose when a dispatch from London said legal experts are puzzled as to whether the old rules governing oceanic exploration would apply to the space age.

Dr. MacKenzie said the theory that landing would comprise an act of possession is "rubbish." The principal point involved in all national acts of possession must be to establish "possession and control."

The claimant must prove to a competent legal authority he is capable of controlling such territory, he said.

French Request Loan To Exploit Iron Ore Find

PARIS (Reuters) — The World Bank is studying a French request for a loan of between $30,000,000 and $60,000,000 to help finance the exploitation of rich iron ore deposits in Mauritania, a French colony in northwest Africa, a bank spokesman said today.

Iron ore reserves have been estimated at more than 100,000,000 tons with a metal content of between 60 and 70 per cent.

QUESTION: When were "drug stores" first established?

ANSWER: As far as we know, it was in Babylon in the middle of the eighth century that privately owned stores preparing and dealing in drugs were established. They were under government supervision; but for the first time in recorded history, the profession of pharmacy had a definite place of its own and was a legitimate part of a public health system.

U.S. EXPERT DEBUNKS THEORY

Retirement Key to Poor Health?

CLEVELAND (AP)—It's time to lay aside the notion that retirement generally leads to poor health.

That's the conclusion in a study made by Cornell University and reported today by Dr. Wayne E. Thompson to the 10th annual gerontological meeting. Gerontology is the scientific study of old age.

Thompson says "if any general effect at all can be discerned, it is that retirement leads to an improvement in health."

He said that the study did find that many persons in retirement are in poor health. But, he said, "it would seem that this can best be understood in terms of poor health leading to retirement and not the reverse."

The study was based on information from persons who have retired as well as from doctors who examined them. Corey said the manual laborer is not as well prepared for retirement as his working superior. He said the solution to this problem is for employers to make a more diligent effort to prepare their manual laborers for retirement.

WEEKEND WEATHER PICTURE ACROSS CANADA

SYNOPSIS — Prospects are for good weather in most areas of B.C. over the weekend. An area of high pressure centred over southern B.C. is steering storms from the Pacific through northern B.C. and the Yukon. Cloudy skies should persist over the north coast and some drifting bands of cloud are expected in the Cariboo but the rest of the province should remain sunny.

Maintaining Wide Vistas Task of Gallery Curator

The news that excavations for the new wing at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria will commence during the first week in December invites us to look forward to a new era in the life of Victoria's art world.

As is so often the case, anticipation whets our expectations and while awaiting completion of the building, and reconsidering numerous suggestions made concerning the type of art to be housed in the wing, we ponder afresh the implications which make this so outstanding as a Centennial project.

The generous size of the cheque, goodwill of behind scenes promotion and the tireless enthusiasm of those who worked so hard to push the scheme beyond blueprint stage prove once again that common sense always triumphs.

And it is something more. It is all part of the new awareness of Canada by Canadians—pinpointed by Bruce Hutchison in his latest book, and which makes Canada such an exciting place in which to dwell. And to top the cake of good fortune, Mr. Alan Jarvis, director of the National Gallery, has just reaffirmed his promise that Victoria's new wing will mean better exhibitions from the East.

All most satisfactory, yet in one's enthusiasm one tends to give scant thought to the extra burden of responsibility which rests upon the shoulders of the curator, Colin Graham. We are indeed lucky.

Guide and Mentor

Broadly, one of the many problems confronting any curator is the question, should he please some of the people some of the time or all of the people all the time? If only the latter was possible, which it isn't, how easy his task would be.

The role of curator is to plot a course through areas of art appreciation; he must guide, and indirectly instruct, and while he might take an occasional bearing from the stars he does this so he can the better steer a steady course.

There are certain rules which no curator can ignore. Like a navigator, he cannot ignore landmarks already plotted. As far as a municipal art gallery is concerned an inflexible criterion of its position in the life of a community is its importance as a source for research.

In paintings, for example, one asks whether it opens its doors to the not so distant past, or does it look far backwards or only to the present and future.

For All Men

Obviously the answer embraces all viewpoints and Mr. Graham has already demonstrated his wide vision and his catholicity. His plans are to make the Gallery fulfill every possible function and in time there will arise a specialist section. It is a happy prospect.

I mention this because I have just been examining some of the 30 works generously placed on permanent loan to the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria by Mrs. Maud F. Brown of Ottawa.

Her husband, the late Eric Brown, was director of the National Gallery between 1910-1939 and it was he who virtually pioneered that institution to its present eminence.

One detects in Mrs. Maud Brown's patronage and encouragement for Victoria's Gallery not only kinship but also awareness of that same pioneer spirit. She must feel, as many of us do, that she is witnessing a very special birth. Certainly

FRANCOISE BORED BUT NOT BORING

Françoise Sagan is still bored. But not too bored to write her third novel about boredom, Those Without Shadows (Dutton).

Françoise is tired, too, not too tired to write about a tired girl and her tired friends—much the same characters as in "Bonjour Tristesse" and "A Certain Smile."

This brief "novel" consists of 125 pages of incidents involving a set of blasé men and women.

In spite of all the ennui attached to Miss Sagan's characters, she somehow manages to make them interesting to the reader, if not to one another.

Twentieth-century Spain ranks the Alhambra, 14th century fortress-palace in Granada, as one of its rarest national treasures. Yet England's Duke of Wellington once declined the Alhambra as a gift, considering it impractical, the National Geographic Magazine said.

her gift indicates confidence in the Gallery's eventual importance.

The works which she has presented are gentle and persuasive. There is a calmness, an air of detachment about them which many contemporary painters must envy.

What could be more assured and delightful, for example, than the "Charcoal Drawing" by Sir E. Wylie Greer unless it is the pleasing and accomplished landscape "End of Winter, Fort Qu'Appelle" by James Henderson. And then there is the 1918 gouache "Cattle" by Sir Arnesby Brown, and his equally enjoyable oil landscape "Wells-by-the-Sea."

Serene Outlook

And how about "Kiosk" by Kathleen Morris or the Cezanne inspired "Landscape with Cottages" by F. H. McGillivray. Are these not works of the Twenties or Thirties which we ignorantly sidestep in our eagerness to push ahead. We do, and we should be ashamed of ourselves.

The roads of art are not always well-cambered and marked with white lines. The greatest pleasures can just as easily be found along infrequently explored lanes and when a gallery allows us to wander at will, then it is fully justifying its existence.

P.S. Readers of "Country Life" and our leading art journals will be familiar with the name of Mr. Denys Sutton, art critic for London's Financial Times. One of England's foremost art critics, a wit and scholar, he is lecturing at the Art Gallery on Oct. 6, and you should make a point of hearing what he has to say.

THE STAMP CORNER

By REG NAIRNE

Perhaps the favorite of all stories about philatelic finds is the one about the collector in Washington, D.C., who some 30 years ago went into the Post Office to buy a sheet of 24c air mail stamps for his firm, and who, when the stamps were handed across the counter, suddenly realized that the aeroplane which formed the central part of the design, was, in each case, printed upside down.

The story further relates how the sheet was sold for many thousands of dollars, though only after the P.O. Dept. had made a vain effort to force the buyer to give back his treasures.

Today these stamps sell readily at $4,000 apiece, for no similar sheets have ever turned up since.

It is easy to see how the error occurred, for the stamp was a bicolor, and therefore had to go through the press twice. A slip on the part of the printer, causing him to feed the sheet wrong-end-foremost into the press for the second color, would do the trick. It has happened before in other countries.

But a recent report in Linn's Weekly Stamp News puts a very different complexion on the origin of the stamps in question. It seems that a Miami lawyer (an ex-judge) has been offering, on behalf of a client, a printer's proof of this rarity, of all things! To make the matter even more sinister, the client is known to be a former official of the government Bureau of Printing!

Now it is conceivable that a printer might make the error as described above, when working at high speed. But what are we to think when we find that he took time off to print a proof of his error?

And what are we to think of the official who secretly kept the proof all these years, although he must have known that the originals were worth a fortune?

Surely we can only conclude that the whole incident was carefully planned in advance, that the sheet was deliberately fed into the press the wrong way, and that the "lucky" collector who "chanced" to buy the sheet, was, in reality, very much in on the deal himself!

Collectors who own this stamp must be feeling rather like the officials of the British Museum when the Piltdown

Skull was debunked! (Latest news is that the owner has "decided" to give back the proof to the government!)

"I'll Cherish Thee..."

We went to a wedding the other night. A lovely affair by candlelight;

And when they signed the register, proceedings did pause, So... Mr. Jock Dunbar, sang... "Because"

This took me back to my childhood fame. It's the song I sang... "when company came." All us kids entertained, my brother a burlesque, And my youngest sister, Grace, But... played Humoresque. But... in MY rendition... one note so high, No one knew whether, to laugh or cry.

After Jock's song, there seemed a long wait. I got fidgety... & couldn't sit straight. So, I glued my eyes to a lady's coat stripes. Then I got to counting the organ pipes. I whispered to the G.F., "there are 30 up there." She gave me the elbow, plus the family stare. Then she whispered back, after moments had spun, "You are wrong... there are thirty-ONE." Then outa those pipes the organ did boom. And those married kids charged outa that room.

We all stood up in that abbey-land, And "my bride" tip-toed and SQUEEZED MY HAND.

BOOK TALK

By JAMES SCOTT

Weighty Dip Into Future Ignores Nuclear Fission

I have been doing quite a bit of talking about big, fat books in this space this fall, but now I have completed what must be the granddaddy of them all for the season. It is by Ayn Rand and is called Atlas Shrugged, a closely printed volume of almost 1,200—count them—pages.

When one finally sets down a gargantuan book such as this, the first question to come to mind is: Was it worth it? Was it worth all the time involved in the writing, all the cost of printing, all the labor of the reading?

To this, I am unable to give an unqualified answer. However, let this fact be noted. I persevered relentlessly to the end, faltering occasionally. It is true, but nevertheless finishing it to the last overwritten word.

This, in itself may tell you something. Despite all my impatience I was unable to renounce the book. The author pulled out all her stops. She knows a lot about how to hold a reader's interest and her theme was developed so that it had a fascination for me which could not be gainsayed.

The theme is the most important part of this book because this is a polemic—a sustained and inextinguishable indictment of many of the features of our present civilization which a lot of people hold dear. It is a defence of the productive and creative faculties of man against all other concepts such as compassion, pity or self-sacrifice.

The heroes are a group of men, led by a mysterious genius called John Galt, all of whom are either highly successful industrialists or highly creative artists and scholars—a great actress, a gifted composer, talented inventors.

One by one these people disappear from the U.S.A. It soon becomes clear that there is a pattern to their disappearances. They seem to have given up in disgust at the way their brains and capacity for production are being used by a welfare state government for the benefit of those less fortunate.

More and more of their ability is being drawn off in the form of income and corporation taxes to pay for what is set up as social legislation but, in reality, is only a cloak for putting control and wealth into the hands of bureaucrats and second-rate swindlers and racketeers.

PERSONAL CONFLICTS

Interlaced in this general theme is the personal story of Dagny Taggart, a beautiful woman devoted to keeping her grandfather's transcontinental railroad in operation, her lover, Hank Reardon, a self-made tycoon and inventor of a miracle metal much superior to steel and Francisco d'Anconia, a brilliant heir to the greatest copper fortune in the world and Dagny's childhood love.

D'Anconia has seen that the only way to save the world is to let it come to the verge of destroying itself; Dagny and Reardon don't are too in love with their industrial empires to give up. This conflict is the kernel of the book.

There is a lot of very wordy sermonizing by these men of action which strikes the reader as somewhat incongruous in people who are set up as the doers of the world. There is a lot of half-baked philosophy which cannot stand the test of logic. And, above all, it is curious to read a book which purports to dip into the future and yet ignores the implications of nuclear fission. Atomic power does not exist in this picture as presented by Miss Rand.

All of which made me wonder if she really knows what she's talking about. And yet, she might be right about the results although they certainly cannot develop in the way laid down in this book.

A vastly entertaining and informative report on Canada's outstanding progress in the last few years!

It takes a GIANT to keep Canada on the go

There are only 6,000 (approximately) new car dealers in Canada to serve more than 4,250,000 car-craving families. Yet these comparatively few dealers perform a giant selling job in moving more than 400,000 new cars a year worth well over $1,000,000,000!

There are only 101 daily newspapers in Canada. Yet every day they roll out more than 4,000,000 copies to do a herculean job of helping to sell Canada's automobiles from coast to coast.

Car dealers and daily newspapers have much in common. Both are upstanding local citizens vitally interested in local affairs. Back of almost every civic drive you'll find the local car dealer supporting it with all his weight. And right beside him, with equally ardent support, is the daily newspaper.

Car dealers, like others, have learned that the daily newspaper puts plenty of weight behind an advertiser's sales message, too. That's why newspapers, each year, carry the biggest share of automotive advertising. Use this giant to put the weight behind YOUR advertising.

All business is local... and so are all newspapers.

Play Acting Not Child's Play For Serious-Minded Actress

By AUDREY ST.D. JOHNSON

Olive Keane only inherited the latter part of her name when she married her husband, John. Just the same it fits her to a "t."

Speaking of "t's," golf is one of her prime interests; and gardening. Another is acting, or any aspect of the theatre, amateur and professional. And when Olive is interested, Olive is, in fact, and if she'll pardon the pun, keen.

Speaking from experience, she is one of the finest character actresses in these parts, as director Phyllis Dulmage and cast of Victoria Theatre Guild's "The Mousetrap," are finding out.

Playing an important lead in the production, Mrs. Keane is bringing to the rehearsals all the energy, vitality, learning and native skill at her command. But while these attributes are hers, they are not reserved exclusively for the benefit of her own part.

She unreservedly shares her knowledge and directs her energy toward the support and encouragement of less experienced players.

A forthright and outspoken person, her compliments are as sincere as her criticism, and incidentally, her opinions are strongly individualistic. Part of her value in a cast, as any good director such as Mrs. Dulmage will discover, is her loyalty and her professional attitude.

In contrast to too many amateurs in the theatre, Mrs. Keane regards preparation of a play as business—serious, absorbing with strong overtones of pleasure.

What makes the amateur theatre amateur in its truest—and worst—sense is a preponderance of the opposite viewpoint—all for pleasure; recreation with the vaguest possible overtones of business.

Mrs. Keane has given several outstanding characterizations to Theatre Guild history: the battle-axe mother in the 1957 drama festival production of Coward's "Fumed Oak"; the irascible old lady in the wheel chair in "The Silver Whistle"; and Catherine Sloper's romantically minded aunt in the Dominion Drama Festival regional winning production of "The Heiress."

ALL ASPECTS

She takes the building of her part beyond the stage of line-study and rehearsal, often making costumes, sometimes designed with the help of her artist husband. She does her own make-up, is diligent in unearthing odd properties.

If she is not happy with a director she will still co-operate but her disapproval of some aspects is not something she can always hide.

To the public who see her in performances of "The Mousetrap" from November 23 to 30, she will doubtless bring the pleasure and satisfaction of a skilled characterist.

As to her costumes, some of whom are new to Theatre Guild, but almost all of whom are considerably experienced, Mrs. Keane will have demonstrated for them afresh that zeal to excel and refusal to recognize any strict limitation in the amateur status which can bring local productions almost indistinguishably close to the pro sphere.

Plenty of Ginger In Rogers' Comeback

By BOB THOMAS

NEW YORK (AP)—"I'm not married any longer, so why shouldn't I work as hard as I can? Idleness breeds mischief or depression, so I'm going to keep busy."

This was Ginger Rogers' explanation of why she is making two important moves in her career:

1. Playing her first night club since she was a youngster in Galveston;

2. Returning to a stage musical for the first time since 1930. Obviously her marriage to Jacques Bergerac is finished. But she isn't moping.

"Las Vegas has been after me to play there for five years," she said. "But I chose to go back to night clubs in a brand-new hotel in Havana because it was new. I'd be the first star to appear there. I'm looking for new challenges."

NO BUTTONS

It was suggested that also the money was good.

"I don't work for buttons," she commented.

"Starting Jan. 28, I begin touring for a year in the national company of Bells Are Ringing," she continued. "Now you might ask why I do the show when it isn't new."

"The reason is that I haven't found a script that is so ideally suited to my talents. I have read at least 20 play scripts in the past few months and I felt none of them was good enough to come into New York. But 'Bells,' which Judy Holliday did originally—and very well—is something that fits me."

"I'm going to see how hard the show is on me," she added. "If it's not too bad, I may make a picture while the show is running in Los Angeles."

What?

"Sure. What's so hard about that?"

"When I was appearing in Girl Crazy here in 1930, I made five movies and thought nothing of it."

SLEEP EN ROUTE

"My one luxury was a chauffeur and limousine. He'd pick me up at my home on Long Island at 6 in the morning, and I'd sleep all the way to the Paramount Studio in Astoria. I'd do a day's shooting and then be driven to the Alvin Theatre that night."

"I just had time to change from movie make-up into my stage make-up and then go on. I didn't think much of it. It was just like having a party every night. The only trouble the same people were at the party each time."

The role in "Compulsion" modeled after the late Clarence Darrow will be played in Meyer Levin's forthcoming drama by Frank Conroy. This is the play based on Levin's bestselling novel which is about Chicago's Loeb-Leopold murder case of the early 1920's. Darrow was the defence attorney.

RECORD SHOP

Genius of Hornist Survives on Discs

By HUMPHRY DAVY

The life of one of England's great musicians was cut short last month when Dennis Brain, a phenomenal player of the French horn, died in a highway accident.

The artist, 36, had a weakness if you can call it that—speed.

He was on his way home from the Edinburgh Festival when his car skidded on a damp road and crashed.

Dennis Brain came from a family of musicians who have been playing in England for three generations. At least five members of his family are and were horn virtuosi. His father, Aubrey Brain, being equally as famous.

It's unfortunate that Brain did not make too many records. His last disc, unless Angel is withholding others for release at some later date, is a performance of Richard Strauss' two horn concertos. He is accompanied by the Philharmonia Orchestra with Wolfgang Sawallisch conducting.

This record will give you some idea of the musician's ability. It's a staggering performance.

There is another record of his worth acquiring. On this disc he is heard playing Mozart's four horn concertos (Angel 35092).

Anyone who likes folk songs sung in the traditional manner, that is without instrumental accompaniment, will derive much pleasure from "The English Singers," (Angel 35461).

This group of six musicians who are known in Canada and the United States, sing madrigals, ballads and folk songs of four centuries.

Selections include songs by William Byrd (1543-1623); Thomas Morley (1558-1603); Gustave Holst (1874-1934) and Ralph Vaughan Williams (1872).

Some of the best are old dance tunes. It would be interesting to hear them arranged for orchestra and vocalists.

POPS LIBRARY: For those who like jazz, this month's pick is "Jazz Goes to Junior College"—the Dave Brubeck Quartet, (Columbia 11834). It's sure to be a big hit with the younger generation.

The disc features five of Brubeck's interpretations recorded from two concerts at Fullerton

HENRY IV STRATFORD SELECTION

STRATFORD, Ont. (BUP)—Michael Langham, artistic director of the Stratford Shakespearean Festival, has announced the selection of Shakespeare's Henry IV, part one, as one of the three plays to be featured during the 1958 festival season.

Langham said that the two other plays to be presented during the 12-week season will be announced later. Rehearsals will start next May 5 and the festival will open June 23.

The sixth annual Stratford festival will run two weeks longer than any previous year, extending to Sept. 13.

COURT DECIDES DUPAS CAN BOX AS WHITE MAN

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Ralph Dupas, third-ranking lightweight contender, Thursday night won his court battle to live and box in Louisiana as a white man.

Judge Rene A. Viosca of Civil Court ordered the New Orleans Health Department to issue Dupas a birth certificate listing his parents as white.

If the judge had declared Dupas' parents Negro, the boxer would not have been allowed to fight white men. Louisiana's segregation laws forbid mixed bouts.

The race of the 21-year-old boxer was first questioned publicly last April when Mrs. Lucretia Gravoleto, former registrar of births for neighboring Plaquemines Parish, appeared before the Louisiana State Athletic Commission.

She told the commission the boxer's real name was Ralph Duplessis and she had registered him at birth as a Negro.

SIDELINE SLANTS

BY

Doug Peden

Clem Crowe appears to be only two yards away from peace-ful dreams for the next two nights.

Although he sends his B.C. Lions out for the final 1957 game against Winnipeg Blue Bombers tonight, it is doubtful if the outcome of that struggle at Empire Stadium—unless the Bombers pull the unexpected and clobber the jitters out of the Leos—will do much to disturb Clem's slumber.

But the memory of six linear feet on Calgary's Mewata Stadium could do just that.

Even if the Lions win tonight, they will still finish up one point behind Calgary Stampeders and out of a Western Inter-provincial Football Union playoff berth for the fourth consecutive year.

Win or lose tonight, Uncle Clem will still be in the traditionally uncomfortable position of coach of a last-place club when Lion directors meet Monday night to decide if they want to offer him a contract for 1958. And since he has stated bluntly that he wants to return, these could be a couple of fitful nights in which to think of the two strides that would have shooed the Lions into a playoff berth and almost certainly have kept the wolves away from his door.

If the meeting had been held in mid-season, Crowe would not have had a chance. But things were breaking his way when the Lions made their belated bid with three wins and a tie and now he seems to have at least an even chance.

The time we wouldn't have given a broken penny for Crowe's chances of being hired again was right after the game in Regina when he gambled with one quarterback—Topsy Vahn—against the Rough Riders.

Clem Stuck Out Neck—Almost Lost It

It was something coaches just don't do, somewhat akin to Casey Stengel sending his Yankees into a key game with only one pitcher in uniform.

Clem knew he was sticking his neck out in his attempt to get greater depth in the rest of his backfield. He almost had it chopped off when Vahn was injured and carried off Taylor Field, leaving the Lions in the unique position of being a professional team without a regular quarterback in action.

Lions lost that one—their fourth defeat in five games—and impatient Vancouver fans made Crowe their No. 1 target. The "Crowe must go" howls were muffled by the garrison finish, but until Monday's meeting you can bet the football filberts will be tossing the Vahn incident and other Crowe mistakes around like hot potatoes.

Still, the incident that must be haunting Clem came in the Lions' third game. Leading, 20-7, at Calgary, the Leos started the second half with a march down the field. They went for a touchdown on third down, missed, and gave up the ball on downs only two yards from pay dirt.

If they had scored then, they would have won instead of losing a 22-20 heart-breaker. And it would have been a four-point—two more for Lions and two less for the Stamps. That two yards would have put the Lions in the playoffs, as things turned out, and almost certainly have made Crowe's job secure.

For a man who may be unemployed in three days, Clem Crowe is credited with some strangely forthright statements. He says he's convinced the current Lions are the best team Vancouver has ever had and were as good as any other WIFU squad except the Eskimos.

Injuries and the fact that the club picked the wrong times to play its poorest games—three times against Calgary—get the blame for keeping the Lions out of the playoffs.

Lion Fans Want to Howl Next Year

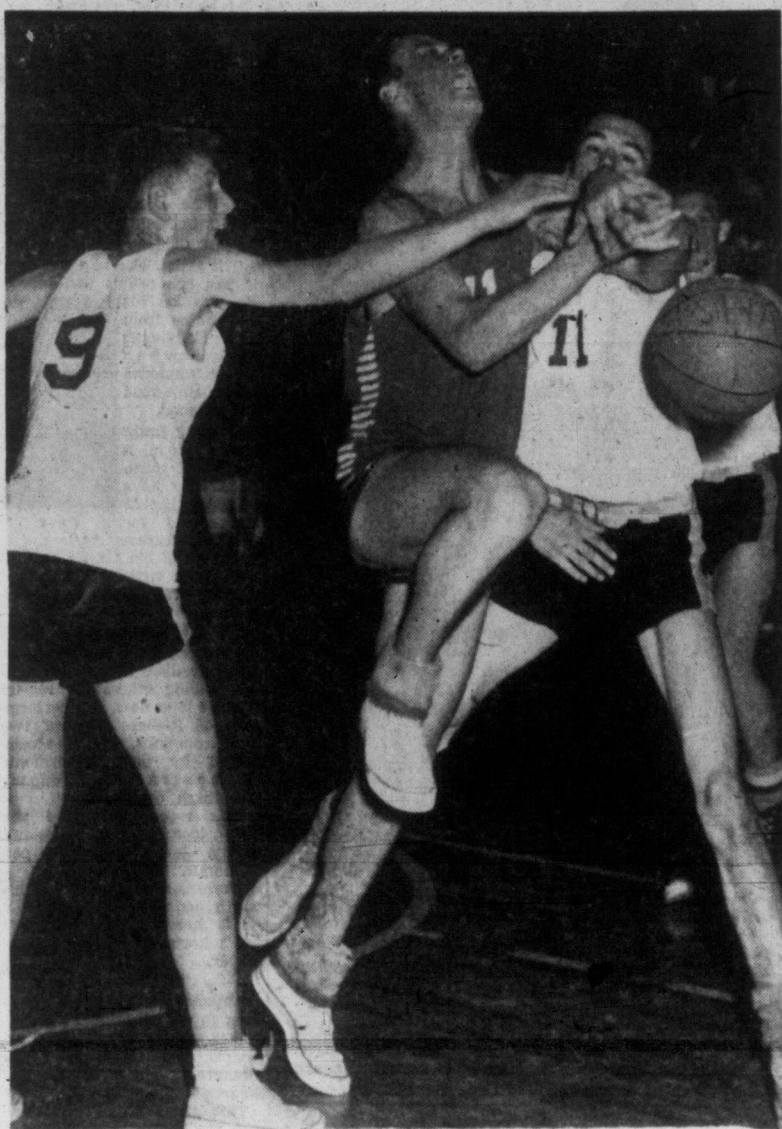

Fans looking at the Leos' record may think otherwise, but experts around the Western Conference also lend support to the claim, and a good number rate Crowe right behind Winnipeg's Bud Grant among the coaches.

Regardless of who handles the reins, Vancouver fans want a playoff club in 1958. After four fruitless years, they are starving for a winning team. And they want one good enough to be a contender for the western berth in the Grey Cup classic in their own Empire Stadium. They want to howl in B.C.'s centennial year.

Although Crowe looked like a gone gosling six weeks ago, Vancouverites have simmered down and appear ready to accept the fact that changing coaches won't work miracles. Unless the directors have lined up a pilot with a proven record, they'll do a lot of thinking before they leap. Darrell Royals and Pop Ivys don't come along every day.

Clem had the Lions rolling in the final part of the schedule. Given the horses he might be the man to drive the club up the ladder next year. He knows his players and the Canadian game and this looks like as good a time as any for the directors to give the Lions some of the stability they have always needed.

Nobody is going to beat the Eskimos as long as Jackie Parker, Normie Kwong, Johnny Bright and company are around. But under Crowe, the Lions could be great in '58. If not Clem, who else?

Les Won't Even Discuss Offer Made to PCL Clubs

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP)—made an offer but I would feel Dodgers scheduled new talks from behind a 17-8 half-time deficit to earn a 29-29 tie at the end of regulation time.

The meeting broke up with O'Connor and six PCL club officials over indemnities. The six-member PCL negotiating committee was picked after a day-long session of the full PCL directorate to work out the thorny problems of a new coast league makeup and the question of damages to be demanded from the National League for invading San Francisco and Los Angeles.

O'Connor said after the night meeting that there was no discussion of court action but he would hold that power in reserve if a settlement isn't reached.

The PCL directors empowered O'Connor to go into court if necessary to seek indemnities for disrupting the league.

O'Connor told reporters the PCL has no intention of trying to prevent Giants and Dodgers from playing in California next season.

"The whole effort now is to get just payment," he said. He and Fred David, president of the Sacramento club, said neither Stoneham nor Bavasi had made any money offer.

O'Connor said whether the PCL can operate next year depends on finding new cities for the San Francisco, Los Angeles and Hollywood franchises.

PLAN 12 TEAMS Possible expansion of the league to 12 teams arose Friday and O'Connor said the possibility of a 12-club league would be thoroughly aired.

"The league won't be stronger unless we have 12 clubs," he said. "I can't say what cities would be involved because some of them are already in leagues."

O'Connor said that some of the cities already mentioned as replacing San Francisco and Los Angeles, new homes of the Giants and Dodgers, just don't have the population yet to make the league a triple A or open status, which it now is. He specifically mentioned Salt Lake City, Phoenix, Ariz., and Spokane, Wash.

Bait Tasty Bit If Cougars Bite

Americans Bow; Canucks Visit Victoria Tonight

Victoria Cougars, who always seem to pack their best punch against Vancouver into two periods, are hopeful of pacing themselves for a route-going effort against the unbeaten Canucks tonight.

Art Chapman's charges dangle their undefeated Western Hockey League string (seven games "long") in front of the hungry Cougars in Memorial Arena tonight. The scrap starts at 8.

And Cougars, who have dropped 3-2 (overtime) and 5-2 decisions to Vancouver earlier this season, appear hungry enough to take a vicious swing at the dangling bait.

Cougars have gone without a winning meal in eight starts. Canucks, by no means fat and content, have digested the sweet fruit of victory in six of their seven games. The other game ended in a draw.

THREE POINTS UP

Canucks' latest feast came at the expense of Seattle Americans Friday night. It was a 2-0 decision that boosted Vancouver three points ahead of second-place New Westminster Royals in the Coast Division race.

Marcel Pelletier collected his second shutout of the season in Vancouver and only had 12 shots to stop to do it. Elliott Chorley and Bob Robinson scored for the winners.

The game saw the Seattle team badly outplayed by Vancouver with only exceptional work by goalie Hank Bassen preventing a rout. Bassen stopped 28 shots, many from point-blank range.

The Canuck rookie line of Orland Kurtenbach, Jim Powers and Ron Hutchinson was the most impressive attacking unit. Kurtenbach time and again led his charges deep into Seattle territory only to be stopped by the great play of the Americans' netminder.

Forward Art Hart and defenceman Bill Davidson showed the best sparks for the badly-outclassed Seattle team.

Guyle Fielder, Seattle centre, missed the game. Fielder, the league's top scorer last year and recently cut by Detroit Red Wings of the National League, is still en route to Seattle for the east.

A standing-room crowd of 5,008 watched the game.

Bremerton Next Stop For Y Club

The powerful Washington Athletic Club toppled Victoria's Flying "Y" Swimming Club 65-37 Friday night in the first of two exhibition galas for the Vancouver Island team against Washington State clubs.

However, coach Archie McKinnon, who made the trip without several of his top swimmers, was well satisfied with his team's performance.

Bruce Warburton placed first in the boys' breaststroke and second in the freestyle. Bob Wheaton won the backstroke event, with Doug Dickie placing third, and the team of Warburton, Wheaton, Dickie and Doug Patterson placed first in the freestyle relay.

In the girls' events, Janie Wheaton won the breaststroke and Jay Botterell placed second. The team travels to Bremerton for another gala tonight.

Flyers Move Out in Front

EDMONTON (CP)—Edmonton Flyers defeated New Westminster Royals 3-1 Friday night to vault into first place in the Prairie Division of the Western Hockey League.

A crowd of 3,410 fans saw Gerry Leonard put Edmonton ahead with the only goal of the first period. After a scoreless second period, Max McNab tied the count at 1-1 early in the third. Three minutes later, at 5:08, Len Lunde put Edmonton ahead and then Chuck Holmes made it 3-1 for Edmonton.

The goal by McNab put him in the league individual point scoring lead with 17 points. He has six goals and 11 assists, and before the game was tied with Fred Hucul of Calgary Stampede.

POWER PLAY Leonard's goal came at 5:31 of the first period on a sliding, screened shot from an Edmonton power play.

McNab, uncovered on right wing, took a pass near the goal mouth and lifted the puck high into the Edmonton nets.

Palmer Takes Lead; Ford Ties Balding

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (CP)—Roseburg, with his record 270 in danger of being topped, is at 203 with 65-71-67.

Toronto's Al Balding fell from first place in the San Diego open golf tournament Friday, but he clung to a second-place tie at the end of the third round. Arnold Palmer, former national amateur champion, moved into the lead by shooting a second straight 68 for a 15-under-par total of 201.

Balding, who shot a 64 in the second round to take a two-stroke lead on Palmer and Fred Hawkins, ran into putting troubles. He wound up with 71, one under par. That gave him 67-64-71—202. Doug Ford, Mahopac, N.Y., also had a 202 total.

Palmer, from La Jolla, Pa., carded a 65 in the opening round at Mission Valley Country Club.

He shot a 32-36 in Friday's third straight sub-par round on the flat layout.

Ford blazed in with a 67 for 202 total to tie Balding. He started with 66 and 69.

HANS KNOWS HOW COLIN FEELS

Mozart, Now That's a Different Story

By HANS GRUBER
Conductor, Victoria Symphony Orchestra

I ought to be writing this week, and on another page, about Mendelssohn, Bach and Sir William Walton, Brahms, and about why you should go and hear their music on Sunday and Tuesday, Nov. 10 and 12, at the Royal Theatre.

Instead, I choose to pursue my notorious penchant for poking my nose where there may be no unanimous agreement as to its belonging. This time, it's hockey.

Regard this, if you will, as an open letter to Colin Kilburn. I am very much with you, in spirit, Colin—and, of course, present in the flesh at the arena at every possible occasion—and I understand what it means to lose to formidable opponents.

We also engage periodically in public contest, except that we "play" Bach and Brahms and Sibelius and Mozart—one at a time, to be sure, but we have yet to win in our unequal struggle. You are in a more fortunate position, so do not lose heart; for I have seen your team, and several of your opponents, and you are not only far more closely their equals than we can ever hope to be to ours—events will prove that you are, in fact, superior to most of them.

However, I am sure that you have the self-confidence to know that, and the ability and courage to mould a team which is going to make the law of averages fall your way. For these first few games were nothing but a cruel twist to that law, disregarding even the flu and injuries. There will be, by that same inexorable law, a good eight wins in a row coming your way, any time now.

All right, you know that and I know that—something like the owner of a vicious appearing dog who assured the guests that he (the dog), was in fact quite harmless. But the guest, with the sharp logic born of apprehension, demanded to know whether even if he and the owner knew that, did the dog also know it? In our case, it may be very well for you and I to know this law of averages, but what really counts, how are we going to let the spectators know about it? Anyway where do you suppose are the thousands of seemingly-vanished hockey fans of only a few short years ago?

Let's see. Do you suppose their disappearance could have anything to do with the higher standard of hockey played today, with the resultant fewer victories for all teams, including our own. I should not like to think so, would you? Because any such mentality which is your friend only in victory could conceivably mean the abandonment of your own country in a war that may, temporarily, go adversely. Rather serious, those vanished hockey fans, don't you think?

You may think, of course, that I am exaggerating the issue. But you admit that the implications are there, don't you? And you agree that the only certain way of removing any such suspicion is for those vanished hockey fans to turn up, especially in times of temporary adversity, for this is when they are needed more than ever to help in speeding the turn of the tide. Good luck tonight.

MAN, WITH AMBITIONS, AT WORK

Muscleman of the middleweight division, Rory Calhoun strengthens his powerful body with exercises such as this. He's the toughest most anxious, and one to beat, to rate a title shot. Calhoun is ready to post bond to meet either champion Carmen Basilio or ex-champ Sugar Ray Robinson. (NEA.)

Variety and Quantity Keep Bowlers Happy

Bowlers from other sections of the country have always complained that there are "never enough" tournaments, or a variety of them. That happened to be a chief complaint of trundlers who attended the Western Canada and Dominion rollofs in Edmonton last spring.

Victoria bowlers, however, don't seem to be in a complaining mood. Locally, the alley interest has been at a high peak for the past few years. And, most important insofar as the average bowler is concerned, there has been a variety of events offered by local alleys.

The 10-pinners, especially, look forward to tournaments since they offer chances at cash prizes.

It is no wonder, then, that the new Inter-City Tenpin League is being so well received. It's one of the new events that has all the appearances of being an extremely popular one.

Action from the Victoria end gets under way Sunday afternoon, starting at 1, at Gibson's Bowladrome. Eight teams will roll six game sets. After the first 12 games, Campbell River No. 1 team leads the league with 71½ points, followed by Nanaimo No. 1 with 59. Nanaimo's second team is a half point behind in third and Victoria is fourth with 55. Chemainus, 54; Campbell River No. 2, 46; Courtenay, 45; and Duncan, 43 points, complete the standings.

More tournaments are on the way. Three will be staged over the Armistice Day weekend, including two for five-pinners. Strathcona Alleys have arranged a four-game, tempin, singles competition, Nov. 11.

At the same time, fivepin enthusiasts will take over Capital City Bowladrome. Al Nelthorpe announced a 20-game handicap marathon and he expects approximately 50 keggers will shell out their $10 entry fee.

Another five-pin competition, for mixed, men's and ladies' doubles, will be held at Gibson's Nov. 9 and 10. Handicaps of 70 per cent will be used.

The week's shining performances were turned in by Bill Holness and Red Waggoner.

Holness, the one-time baseball pitcher who is attempting to prove a ball is a ball matter which delivery is used, set a city tempin high mark for the second straight week.

Bowling in Gibson's senior league, Holness put together games of 257, 193 and 200 for a 650 triple, 14 pins better than the record he set last week. At that rate, Bill might be ready for another Pacific Northwest championship. Holness teamed up with Bill Coates two years ago to win the PNW doubles at Seattle.

The consistent Mr. Waggoner went over the 900 mark in the Esquimalt Bowladrome Fivepin League play for the third straight week. His latest effort was 902, including a rather nifty 730 single.

He's working on George Adams' alley record of 989. George, incidentally, came up with another nice mark, 806 and a 318 single, as 28 Esquimalt trundlers went over the 700 mark this week. A. Loewen, 807 (335), and Bill Smith, 815 (333), also went over 800.

Other top scores were: Phil Young, 732, 752; J. Munro, 734; Ben Price, 734; Darrel Prezaue, 734; Doug Crawford, 738, 740; Fred Frethrey, 743; Harold Gent, 743 (300 single); Bill McKinnon, 744; Flora Kierker, 746; Marie Fisher, 754 (307 single); Peggy Hancock, 760 (311 single); G. Worrall, 768; E. Liska, 771, and G. Roskamp, 776 (343 single).

Shuttle Queen Knows It's All in Wrists

By ERNIE FEDORUK

Friday's opening of the Victoria Lawn Tennis and Badminton Club's second annual open invitational badminton tournament attracted a layman among the spectators. He was decidedly interested in the proceedings but, nevertheless, a layman.

The layman has attended several badminton tournaments, it transpired, but always turned away with a question unanswered.

—He has always wanted to know, he said, if persons playing the racket games—tennis and badminton—develop any talents playing one game that prove valuable when switching to the other sport.

In other words, he continued, can a tennis enthusiast pick up pointers by playing badminton that could prove beneficial to his (her) tennis game? And vice-versa?

CLAIRE KNOWS

Friday night our layman friend left Amphion Street Hall a satisfied customer. He just happened to direct his problem to a person who plays and knows both games—Vancouver's Claire Lovett.

"Claire, two-time Canadian ladies' singles champion in the shuttle sport as well as co-holder of the Dominion doubles title on three occasions, supplied an answer.

"If you have been a tennis player, you can become a better-than-average badminton player. And by playing badminton, a tennis player finds that his overhead smashes improve.

WRIST GAME

"Tennis is played, generally, with a cocked wrist while badminton is more of a wrist game. Both keep you in good condition," she added.

Mrs. Lovett, housewife and football fan, is on hand to defend her triple laurels. She walked off with the singles title last year and then joined forces with Victoria's Maureen Bray and Bert Ferguson of Vancouver to win the ladies' and mixed double events.

This grand-daughter of one of the original founders of "Pile-of-Bones" (Regina, Sask., to you, bub) seems to come by her athletic prowess naturally. Claire (nee Ehmman) was also one of Saskatchewan's and possibly Canada's, top women basketball stars.

Although she started her badminton career at Regina's Wascana Club, it wasn't until she moved to Vancouver in the early '40s that she won her first Canadian title.

Claire and other visiting stars swung into action today and the Victoria Lawn Tennis and Badminton Club courts were busy from 9:30 this morning.

Action will continue all day with semi-finals scheduled to be played about 8 tonight.

The three-day tournament winds up Sunday afternoon with finals scheduled to start at noon.

Spider Wants Champ After Whipping Willie

NEW YORK (UP)—Middleweight contender Spider Webb, victor over Willie Vaughn in a five-alarm blazer of a fight, said today, "after that one, I know I'm ready to take on any 160-pounder in the world—particularly the champion."

Webb of Chicago, the sixth ranking aspirant, explained, "that was the fastest 160-pounder I ever fought; seemed like we were going all-out every second. And I don't know what kept him on his feet—under the pace and the punches that he took."

The Spider, weighing 158½ pounds to 160½ for the California state champion, wound up with a unanimous decision at Madison Square Garden, despite Vaughn's desperate, floundering rally in the last two rounds.

"I don't know what my next match will be," said 26-year-old Webb, who registered his 25th victory in 27 starts before a rainy-night crowd estimated at 2,000. "But I'll fight anybody who can advance me toward the title."

Although 24-year-old Vaughn of Los Angeles was a 5-1 underdog for their television tussle, he forced the fighting in every round and provided menacing opposition. Webb beat him by counter-punching at long range with left hooks and straight rights.

Lanky Vaughn, who suffered his 17th defeat in 56 bouts, said, "I thought I won. I thought I had an edge. And I'd like to fight him again tomorrow night to prove it."

Eilers Defeat A's in Opener

ALBANY—Vancouver Eilers defeated Albany Athletics, 57-54, Friday night in the opening game of the basketball season here.

Standout player for the A's was Neil Dirom, 18, of Duncan, who scored 16 points in his first appearance in a senior "A" game. A student at Cowichan High School, he has given up playing for the school in order to become a regular member of the Athletics.

Scoring honors for the game went to John McLeod, who potted 18 points for the Eilers; Standing six feet, six inches, McLeod holds the UBC record for scoring on rebounds, and was a member of the Canadian Olympic team.

NEW YORK—Spider Webb, 158½, Chicago, outpointed Willie Vaughn, 160½, Los Angeles, 10.

MELBOURNE, Australia—Ricardo Marcos, 172, Melbourne, stopped Sandy Aspinosa, 175, Italy, 6.

VIKING VIEWS

By IAN SMITH

It wasn't apathy, and it wasn't the flu. It was just a week when nothing big happened in sports at Victoria College.

But there was still plenty going on.

Top news of the week concerned Viking crests. A new innovation this year, they are not to be confused with the big block Vs awarded to outstanding sportsmen at the College.

The Viking crests will be distributed to team members of all major College sports—men's rugby and soccer, women's grass hockey and men's and women's basketball.

Five-and-one-half inches high by three inches wide at the base and two inches wide at the top, the crests will feature a distinctive reproduction of a Viking chieftain in green, yellow and brown.

The chieftain will be pictured leaning on his axe above the word "Vikings," black lettering on a white background. Around the circumference of the crest will be bands of yellow and blue, the College colors.

Reason for the issuing of the distinctive crests, according to men's athletic director Tom English, is "to establish a symbol by which members of College teams may be recognized everywhere."

In other sporting news, the Vikings, College junior men's basketball squad, and Norsemen, College senior "B" representatives, are preparing for action.

Both teams will compete in the Victoria Senior "B" League during the regular schedule but come playoff time the Vikings and Royal Roads other junior team in the circuit will play for the junior title.

High hopes are also being entertained for a junior women's B.C. championship at the College for the Vikettes women's team is looking extremely sharp in practice sessions.

In all major sports, sports council members are writing Vancouver in hopes of lining up games with mainland teams.

WIN TWO EVENTS

Shawnigan Runners End Vic High Reign

After several years of almost complete dominance of the Legion Road Races, Victoria High School finally succumbed to outside competition. Runners from Shawnigan Lake Boys School claimed two of the three events held at Vic High Friday.

Last year the Vic runners swept 11 of the 12 trophies up for competition, this year they could claim only seven of the 12. The surprising Shawnigan Lake crew took the other five.

David Ross of Shawnigan led the junior field with a time of 12:27 for the 2.6 mile course with team mate Chris Longridge only 5 seconds behind him.

In the Intermediate run Fred Waters of Shawnigan led the 11-man field over the three-mile course in 15:07. Simon Princentburg, a promising young junior with Vic High squad, was second in 15:26.

Victoria High couldn't help but maintain its honors in the senior open event. All four competitors were Vic High runners. Bill Williams, 1955 junior champ, won with comparative ease, out-distancing last year's intermediate winner Edward Pomeroy, by well over 400 yards. Williams covered the four-mile course in 20:29.

Major Robert Love of the Britannia Branch, Canadian Legion, presented trophies to the first three runners in each event.

STETSON HATS

STETSON "Shaped-to-wear" hats make an immediate hit with smart men because they're completely right at the first "try-on". They come from the factory with creases and dents already moulded in—where they should be, as they should be. And Stetson "Shaped-to-wear" hats stay right, indefinitely. They're "acquainted" against showers, incorporate traditional Stetson quality and value.

Stetson prices: $9.95, $11.95, $15 and up.

Smart "Shaped-to-wear" styles are also produced by MALLORY—a famous brand name since 1817, and one of the Stetson Group of Companies.

Normal Life for Boy After Rare Surgery

(From CP Dispatches)

VANCOUVER—A seven-year-old boy, limited in activity since he was born, will be able to run and play like other children following a delicate operation on his heart.

Details of the operation, the first of its kind performed in B.C., were released Friday by Dr. Lawrence Ranta, medical director of the Vancouver General Hospital.

The unidentified boy, a B.C. resident, is recovering now from the operation. He was kept alive by a mechanical heart while surgeons patched a hole in his own heart the size of a 50-cent piece. The operation began at 8 a.m. Tuesday and lasted seven hours. For 23 minutes the oxygenator was used to bypass the boy's heart to keep blood flowing to the rest of his body.

WHAT'S YOUR OPINION?

By DINAH KERR and IRVING STRICKLAND

Question: "Do you think old age pensioners should be allowed to live outside Canada and continue to receive their monthly pensions?"

Walter Matthews, 808 Duns-muir: "No, I don't. I believe pensioners should make their permanent residence in Canada but be allowed to spend six months out of the country each year. I'm a pensioner, but I figure on staying in Canada, though."

Matthews Martin

John Martin, hardware store owner, 3062 Larkdown: "Let them leave if they want to. When a pensioner reaches the age of 65 or 70 he's entitled to a few privileges, because he's earned them."

Mrs. Rose Walker, 2824 Heath: "Yes, I do. If I were an old age pensioner I'd move where it was nice and warm. Pensioners should be able to decide where they'd like to live without being afraid that they'd lose their monthly cheques."

Walker Kipling

Miss Ruth Kipling, 1210 Montrose: "No. The money is being given by Canada and should be spent in Canada. I know that's not a popular opinion but that's how I feel about it."

Mrs. Lawrence A. Orton, 914 Parkland: "Yes, I figure if they're entitled to the money they're entitled to spend it where they wish. Their pension money would stretch much further in Australia or Japan than it does in Canada."

Orton Brine

Fred Brine, photo finisher, 748 Fort: "I don't believe they should be allowed to live in another country permanently but they should at least be allowed to leave Canada for six months or a year at a time. I know I'd like to take a long holiday when I become eligible for a pension."

Super-Service Bus On Display Thursday

A motor bus equipped with stainless steel snack bar, coffee maker and restroom will be on display at Vancouver Island Coach Lines depot next Tuesday.

This is the very latest thing in buses, the German-built "Golden Eagle" owned by Continental Trailways.

Continental Trailways recently bought 50 of the golden-hued aluminum vehicles for use up and down the U.S. Pacific Coast.

They are equipped with self-leveling suspension, a complete observation lounge, air conditioning and a 280-horsepower diesel engine.

FREAK BULLET INJURES BOY

NEWPORT, Ky. (CP)—Robert Gloden, 11, was shot Friday by a bullet in a pot of boiling water.

The boy was standing near a stove at his home when a .22-calibre bullet rolled from a shelf, dropped into the boiling water and exploded. He suffered minor wounds.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP)—Aneurin Bevan says Americans will have to change their attitudes and start compromising with the Communist powers if the world is to escape total destruction.

SWEEP WIN BRINGS LOSS OF SLEEP

VANCOUVER (CP)—Donna Patricia Aubert, four, has started to keep late hours since she won $28,000 earlier this week on the Irish sweepstakes.

"People keep telling her she is rich, and things like that, and I guess the excitement is too much for her," complained her father, William Aubert, Friday night.

"Here it is after 9 p.m. and she simply won't go to sleep."

It was difficult to say what Donna thought about it all.

"She just talks to her teddy bear about it," he said.

Mr. and Mrs. Aubert and Donna were off today for Toronto where the girl will appear on a TV program.

Lecturing at the Harvard Law School forum, the leader of the British Labor party's left wing said Friday night:

"The techniques of modern warfare have rendered democratic institutions obsolete."

He said the decision to use atomic or hydrogen weapons would not be made by a representative body but by a single individual in the United States or Russia.

"In this respect," Bevan said, "there is no difference between the free world and the Communist world. The decision to use such weapons would not be made by representative assemblies."

PM Announces Wheat Agreement With India

OTTAWA (CP)—India has agreed to take $7,000,000 worth of Canadian wheat as part of her Canadian Colombo Plan contribution, Prime Minister Diefenbaker announced today.

The wheat, to be shipped shortly from eastern Canadian ports, is to help meet India's "pressing needs for food grains," Mr. Diefenbaker said in a statement.

It is understood that about 3,700,000 bushels of wheat are involved. This shipment, together with others to go to Pakistan and Ceylon under the Colombo Plan, will bring to a total of $10,000,000 the amount of Canadian wheat and flour to be contributed by Canada as a Colombo Plan gift in the current fiscal year.

Canada's Colombo Plan contribution this year amounts to $34,400,000. It is to be boosted to $35,000,000 in 1958-59. Of this $34,400,000, India gets about $15,000,000; Pakistan about $12,000,000 and Ceylon some $2,000,000.

Under the wheat agreements, India, for example, would obtain the wheat without cost and then sell it to local distributors for rupees, using the rupees for capital development.

The Canadian government earlier announced that Pakistan has agreed to take $2,000,000 worth of Canadian wheat this year and that Ceylon would take $1,000,000 in flour.

Militia Role In CD Told By Brigadier

B.C. area commander, Brigadier Joseph W. Bishop, Friday clarified the role of the militia in relation to civil defence.

He said, during a visit here, "the army is still the army, concerned with its traditional job of the defence of Canada, including, of course, aid to the civil power in the event of civil emergency."

He had inspected the 5th Independent Medium Battery, RCA, and B platoon of 156 Company, RCASC.

In addition, he presented Canadian Forest Decorations to Capt. M. F. Connor, Lieut. F. E. Richardson and Bdr. A. W. Arstad and certificates of military qualifications to 14 others.

Canada's trade deficit in the first half of 1957 was $608,000, compared to $593,000,000 in the first half of 1956.

DENYS SUTTON

Art Lecturer To Talk Here

A distinguished lecturer will speak at the Art Gallery next Wednesday evening on "New Developments in Modern Painting" (abstraction, realism, action painting).

Art critic of international repute, writer and commentator, Denys Sutton is traveling across Canada under auspices of the National Gallery, Ottawa. Born in England and a graduate of Oxford he was attached to the Foreign Office during the war years, later being secretary to the International Commission for Recuperation of Works of Art.

He was also visual arts specialist at UNESCO in 1947, a visiting lecturer at Yale University and at the American Seminar, Salzburg. Formerly art critic to Les Arts (Paris), and Art News (New York) among other publications, he is at present art critic and market correspondent to the Financial Times.

Mr. Sutton has published a number of books on the art of many periods and countries and has contributed to The Yale Review, Times Literary Supplement and The New York Times, as well as to many other leading journals.

His appearance at the Victoria Gallery will constitute a highlight of the winter program.

Esquimalt's Merger Attitude Criticized

Esquimalt council was chided Friday for its follow-the-leader role in avoiding a ways and means study of investigating amalgamation.

Saanich Reeve Arthur Ash and Mayor Percy Scurrell joined in deploring Esquimalt's refusal to study the question "on its merits" because Oak Bay had decided against participating.

"Amalgamation certainly should not be brushed aside in this manner," said the reeve. "A question as important as this requires thoughtful and earnest consideration by every elected representative."

Mayor Scurrell admitted disappointment because, "regardless of what any other municipalities did, it would be advantageous to consider the matter on its merits. Oak Bay might not find it so but it might be of advantage to Esquimalt."

Zhukov Successor Gets First Airing

LONDON (AP)—The Moscow radio Friday made its first mention of Marshal Rodion Malinovsky in his new capacity as Soviet defence minister.

A broadcast in Arabic said he headed a Soviet delegation which welcomed to Moscow the Egyptian commander-in-chief, Maj. Gen. Abdel Hakim Amer.

WOMEN'S SPECIALTY SHOP OPENS SECOND STORE

The growth of business in this area is evident in the many new firms which have opened during recent years, their subsequent expansion, and the continued growth of old established companies.

Toojay's Ladies' Accessories Ltd., 622 View Street, was a new business for Victoria two and a half years ago. Thanks to the wholehearted acceptance of Victoria women, Mrs. Joan Riome and Mrs. Jean Boyd, co-owners of Toojay's, have in this short period of time built their business into a highly popular women's specialty shop. Business is in the habit of progressing in this city and it was inevitable that the store would expand. The new fashion spot, Toojay's at 1680 Douglas Street, is the result.

Along with this new store, the recently completed Mallek Block is the new home of several Victoria firms which have served this city and surrounding area for many years. These include F. W. Francis Limited, Mallek's, Coast Hardware and also a new business for Victoria—Douglas Pharmacy.

Division of Areas Will Please Contemporary-Minded Women

A separate wing housing kitchen, utility and storage space, is a feature of this individually styled, contemporary design.

Three bedrooms, bathroom and extra washroom, open compactly from a short hall forming a completely separate unit from the living and working areas.

The living room is elegantly long and well-lighted with access to the garden. Space considerations are preserved but the dining room is satisfactorily separated by means of a divider which can be developed according to individual preference.

Total floor area is 1,363 square feet. Working drawings for the plan may be obtained at minimum cost from Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

QUIZZING THE GARDENER

By JACK BEASTALL.
Q. What are lentils and can they be grown here? Mrs. J. F., Craigflower.

A. Botanically the lentil is Lens esculenta, related to the vetches. It is an annual herb growing to about 18 inches with leaves composed of several leaflets terminating in a tendril by which the plant clings to supports. It is native to Southern Europe and extensively cultivated there, and in Egypt, Syria, and Mexico as a cheap and nutritious food for humans and animals. It is doubtful if our average summer temperature and long summer days would suit this crop.

Q. A potted azalea has formed buds but some of the leaves are turning yellowish and drooping. What will prevent this loss of leaves? Mrs. G. T. Esquimaux.

A. A certain amount of leaf replacement takes place on all so-called evergreens and it is quite normal for indoor azaleas to drop some leaves after bud formation. Run your hand lightly through the foliage to loosen the old leaves and remove those which fall.

WEEK'S WORK

By JACK BEASTALL.
Take time to prepare planting holes carefully for shrubs and trees. It is a cheap form of insurance against losses.

Perennial plantings may be cleaned of dead foliage and have soil lightly forked over if not too wet and heavy.

Flowering shrubs such as spiraea, deutzia, forsythia, lilac, philadelphus (mock orange), Ribes sanguinea (flowering currant) may all be planted now.

Window and patio boxes which have been cleared of summer plants may be planted with wallflowers and bulbs, or low-growing heathers, if in a sunny spot.

Most fuchsias grown in beds and borders are hardy enough if lightly heaped with twiggy material to protect the lowest shoots.

African violets (saintpaulia) will like 23 hours sunlight daily in window from now on, or artificial light.

Cut asparagus growth to soil level, and dress bed with compost or old manure.

Sow broad beans.

Finish digging of potatoes, gladioli, and dalias. All should be quickly and thoroughly dried on the surface before storing.

A vaccine to combat Brucella bacteria in goats has been developed. The bacteria are responsible for undulant fever.

Fall Planting Of Strawberries

GENEVA, N.Y. (UP) — Fall planting of strawberries, which may be set as late as November, has shown highly productive results, according to tests carried on at Cornell University's agricultural experiment station here.

Reporting on the tests, small fruit specialist George L. Slate noted that plants of eight berry varieties set out in the fall out-yielded plants set in the spring on an average of 20 per cent for all varieties.

Slate said that fall-planted strawberries send out runners earlier in the spring and in greater numbers than do spring-set plants. He explained that it is the early runners that produce most of the fruit the following season.

Disadvantages of fall planting are the necessity for extra mulching and greater trouble with weeds. Also, it is sometimes difficult to get plants in the fall, according to Slate.

General's Wife Flies Plane; Shocks London

LONDON (Reuters) — The tabloid London Daily Mirror Friday cocked its brow at reports that actress Jessie Royce Landis, the wife of a United States general, had flown from Iran to London in a military plane and had taken over the controls.

"Image the row there would be if a British Army general flew his wife around with him in a service airliner . . . and even allowed her to pilot the thing," said the paper's Diary columnist.

"The questions in Parliament and the rumpus would go on for weeks. But it seems the Americans can do it without fearing a question in Congress or a Senate investigation."

The Mirror's comments were provoked by the arrival here Thursday of Maj. Gen. John F. R. Seitz, chief of the United States military mission to Iran, and his wife, Miss Landis, on their way home via Cairo and

BEASTALL ADVISES

Make Lawn Repairs Now Before Soil Turns Soggy

By JACK BEASTALL

Providing the weather is reasonably fair and the soil still in a workable condition, early November is a good time to renovate an established lawn.

A lawn with proper drainage should not yet be too wet for working on, but if there is any doubt it is better to keep off.

Shallow depressions, not more than one inch deep, can be levelled by filling them with a mixture of soil and compost, and the present grass will usually come through the fill.

Depressions deeper than one inch may be treated in either of two ways. They may be filled and re-seeded in the spring, or the turf may be lifted and under-filled now.

The second method requires that the turf be cut with a sharp, square-nosed spade and rolled back. The soil mixture is then filled in to the right level, the sods replaced and tamped firmly into the fill.

High spots may be lowered by the same process, removing the excess soil instead of filling in.

The soil mixture used for both surface and under-filling should be about half and half soil and well rotted compost or well rotted manure.

The texture of the mixture must be fine and it is best worked through what is known as a sieve, griddle, or wire screen. A one-half-inch mesh is about right, although a one-quarter-inch mesh will be suitable for the soil.

"Well rotted" is a term having a different meaning to different gardeners. In this case it means compost which has broken down to a condition almost equal to soil, or manure which has reached the stage where it is fine and crumbly.

After screening, the two ingredients are thoroughly mixed by frequent turning with the spade. If the soil is on the heavy side a little sand should be added.

When top-leveling, rake the fill each way and work it well down into the grass, tapering the amount of fill to nothing around the edges of the depression.

It is a wise precaution to place lengths of shiplap or light board where the loaded wheelbarrow will cross the grass. This will prevent additional depressions which will need filling.

Weeds are removed by the time-honored hands-and-knees method because weed sprays are not effective when the average daytime temperature is less than 45 degrees F. and the weeds are not making strong growth.

Record for Atlantic Set by BOAC Airliner

MONTREAL (CP) — BOAC said Thursday one of its DC-7C airliners made a trans-Atlantic record Wednesday night when it flew 3,104 miles from Montreal to Prestwick, Scotland, in seven hours, 51 minutes. The previous record, set by TCA, was 8 hours, 1 minute. Captain Derek Walbourn was in command of the BOAC flight.

Mobile Toy Chest Travels With Tots

By MR. FIX

This mobile toy chest is designed to encourage the small child to keep his toys picked up and in order.

A do-it project for the average home handyman, it should fill a real need which will be created in the wake of Santa's visit.

You'll need 1"x12" lumber for bottom, sides and ends; 1"x14" lumber for two-part lid.

The inside rails can be made of 1"x2" lumber or finished lath. Fitted across the corner posts on each side of the box, they'll provide storage racks for children's books and boxed games. Corner posts and axle rails are of 2"x2" lumber.

HERE'S HOW to construct the mobile toy chest:

First, cut all lumber to the dimensions shown in the sketch. Edge-glue the bottom, end and side panels. Fasten bottom panel to the axle rails with glue and 2 1/4-inch No. 10 flathead wood screws. (Countersink the screw heads.)

Assemble sides, using wood screws and glue, and fasten to floor of the box with wood screws which have been driven through the bottom boards. Add the box ends to the assembly.

THE WHEELS are each made of two pieces of 1"x8" lumber, glued together in such fashion that the grain is crossed.

Inscribe a circle six inches in diameter for each wheel and cut out with a coping saw. Drill 1/2" diameter hole in centre of each wheel.

Drill pilot holes in ends of axle rails, using a No. 25 drill for hard woods. For soft woods, use a No. 32 drill.

Attach wheels with 3 1/4-inch No. 14 wood screws.

Round all sharp edges by sanding or rasping, and finish corners with soft, 1-inch cotton rope, glued and fastened with finishing nails.

FIX-IT FORUM

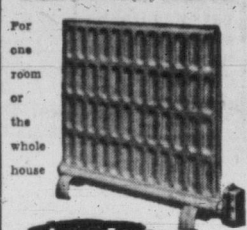

Q—Is there any safe solution with which to fireproof Christmas trees?—D. T.

A—You can't fireproof them. Various solutions are available, but none has performed with complete satisfaction. Best bet is to take all safety precautions and take the tree down as soon as it starts to shed needles, or the needles become brittle or turn brown.

Insulating and building materials were first made from sugarcane bagasse in 1920 in Louisiana.

Potholes in Blacktop Are Easily Repaired

If your blacktop driveway has crumpled along the edges or gone pot-holed, you can consider yourself fortunate in at least one respect. Blacktop repairs are comparatively simple.

You'll need neither an asphalt mixing plant in your back yard, nor powerful road-rolling equipment. A pick and shovel to clear away the old, crumbled material, and a home-made tamper to compact the new—that's about the extent of the equipment requirements.

Repair materials you'll need are either gravel or crushed rock—whichever is more readily available—and an asphaltic goop which acts as a binder. Many paint and hardware stores carry asphalt emulsions, which are quick-setting and easy to handle. Asphalt and gravel also can be obtained premixed.

PROCEDURE

Here is the procedure to follow in patching deep holes and deeply rutted areas in blacktop driveways:

After clearing away the debris, dig down to a solid base. In severe cases, this may mean digging below the level of the driveway base. Then drop a layer of large stones into the bottom of the hole.

Fill an ordinary garden sprinkling can with emulsified asphalt and pour it evenly over the sides and bottom of the depression. Add about an inch of pea-sized gravel and pound this layer with a 2x4 board or home-made tamper. Follow with alternate one-inch layers of gravel, then asphalt.

CLEAN CAN

For the top layers, use fine-screen gravel and build it up about 1/2 inch above the driveway surface. After coating the top layer with asphalt, sprinkle sand on the patch.

Clean out the sprinkling can with water immediately after use. If traces of emulsion remain in the can, dissolve them with kerosene.

Lifetime Wear Hand Sander

CHICAGO (UP) — A hand sander which the manufacturer claims "will never wear out" is now being offered to do-it-yourself enthusiasts.

The sander is a wooden block shaped for comfortable fit in the hand, with a screw adjustment to lock the sanding shoe tightly in position.

Since the sanding shoes are the same abrasive which has lasted for months under heavy industrial use, the manufacturer believes that it will offer "lifetime" service in home shop applications.

Nothing glorifies a home like PV PLYWOODS

One decorating secret that makes thousands of homes so inviting... that adds interest, charm and hospitality, is the studied use of PV plywoods. PV plywoods—the aristocrats in their field—have the warmth and friendliness that "make a house a home". Shown here are only four of seven PV Brand decorative plywoods. Use them anywhere—as general panelling, for "accent walls", room-dividers, built-ins, furniture. Use them for building new living areas such as attic bedrooms or basement game-rooms.

In spite of their rich, luxury look, PV plywoods are priced within the modest budget. Why settle for less? See PV plywoods at your building supply dealer—or mail coupon for idea-packed descriptive literature.

Man Mailed Letter of Apology Before Going on Shooting Spree

VANCOUVER (CP)—William James Blitch mailed a letter of apology to his mother before a wild shooting affray Thursday night which resulted in his death.

Mrs. Lillian Blitch received the apology from her son Friday morning, less than 14 hours after he had shot his young bride of less than three months and his mother-in-law and then killed himself.

Blitch apologized for the "unhappiness . . . and shame" he would cause his mother.

"I could never tell in a million years how sick I feel for the unhappiness I am going to cause you and the shame," the letter said.

"All I can say is I am truly sorry. Please be brave."

The letter was poked through Mrs. Blitch's letterbox at 9 a.m., less than 14 hours after her son stuck a .22-calibre pistol and .303-calibre rifle through the letter slot at the home of his father-in-law and fired at his 17-year-old wife and 40-year-old mother-in-law.

After firing nine shots at Mrs. Marion Lewis, his mother-in-law, and his wife Rosemarie, he ran to the backyard, reloaded and shot himself in the lower part of the head. He died three hours later.

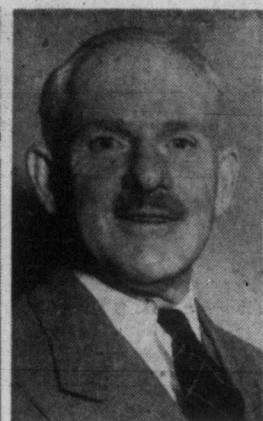

His wife was hit in the shoulder and Mrs. Lewis was wounded in the hip. Both were in satisfactory condition Friday.

4 Civic Office Aspirants Named As 3 Others Announce Retirement

Four more candidates in Greater Victoria civic elections Dec. 12 were announced Friday while three office-holders said they were quitting this year.

The candidates are: Stanley Murphy, seeking a Saanich Council seat after a previous unsuccessful try; Kenneth Murphy, repeating efforts for an Oak Bay Council seat; G. Fred Gilbert, of Sidney, and Frederick Jeune of Saanich, standing for re-election as trustees.

On District 63 (Saanich), school board. Oak Bay Coun. J. V. Johnson said he will not run to retain his seat. Gordon Carter will end his term as city police commissioner.

Esquimalt police commissioner Elvan Walters said he would not accept re-appointment by the provincial government because he disagreed with the change eliminating elections.

"That would be just agreeing this fascist way of doing things is right," he said. "Hitler and Mussolini started by getting the police under their control . . . I wouldn't take any office where I couldn't represent the people."

Greater Victoria school board chairman W. H. Golby appealed for plenty of candidates to run for seats as trustees, aiming his remarks particularly at PTA organizations, to prevent repetition of last year's results when five trustees were returned by acclamation.

B.C. Newcomers Actively Help Centenary Plan

New British Columbians are taking an energetic part in the province's centennial celebrations, L. J. Wallace, committee chairman, said Friday.

"People from other countries are working with local centennial committees such as folk festivals, and in some areas they are presenting their own large scale programs," he told a meeting of Victoria Citizenship Council at Spencerhouse.

"They are helping to make our centenary next year a very colorful affair . . . and they are finding their own place in the province perhaps more quickly through this."

29 Escape Injuries As Fire Hits Plane

NEW YORK (AP) — A London-bound plane's 21 passengers and eight crew members escaped injury Friday night when one engine of a Trans-World airliner caught fire on an Idlewild Airport runway.

The plane had taxied several thousand feet when the blaze broke out. The pilot brought the craft to a halt and all aboard scrambled to safety through the emergency chute.

TOPICS OF THE DAY

Moving gradually toward a goal of $251,717, the Community Chest recorded a total of $159,911 in collections at noon today.

The chest campaign through Greater Victoria and outlying areas will continue until all divisions have completed their calls.

Persons or firms who have been missed by the canvass may donate by phoning chest headquarters, 2-5121. A canvasser will call for the donation.

Meeting to form a Saanich board of trade is planned for Nov. 13 at 8 p.m. in Lake Hill Community Hall. A. R. Wakeham said Friday.

CHEST MAKES DREAMS COME TRUE

Adoption of Baby Seems Like Heaven-Sent Miracle

By DINAH KERR

Everyone can guess how parents who cannot have children of their own, feel when they first apply to adopt a baby.

The big decision—the dreams that seem too good to come true—the awful realization that you are among hundreds of parents who are also waiting for babies—the endless hopeful, hopeless waiting.

Friday, through the co-operation of the Family and Children's Service, a Community Chest agency, I was able to see the realization of one family's dreams.

The service had found the perfect daughter for a young couple with one adopted three-year-old son.

Times' photographer Bill Halkett and I were invited to accompany social worker Mrs. Pat Murray as she took the final steps to unite mother and child.

New Mother Waits

She was a "love child"—the daughter of an unmarried mother who had signed final papers for adoption after reaching the heart-breaking decision that she could not provide for her baby.

Now, across town, a new mother was waiting to take her.

Waiting, while the nurse dressed the baby in her going-away outfit—snowie nightie and pink knitted bonnet, booties and sweater.

Then we set off—me with the baby, Bill with his camera and Mrs. Murray with a 24-hour formula in a milk bottle and a baby book, a gift of the Family and Children's Service.

On the way, Mrs. Murray explained that we could take pictures but the names of the new parents must not be used. A primary rule of adoption is that the natural mother never knows where her baby has been taken. When she signs the adoption papers she signs the baby over for life.

Mrs. Murray swung into the driveway of a modern home and took the infant from my arms.

She's Pretty

We knocked and the mother, an attractive, thirtyish woman, met us at the door.

We greeted each other and she took the baby, rocking her for a moment in an embarrassed silence.

Finally she spoke. "How are you?" she crooned to the little girl who was sleeping peacefully. "Well, look at this—she's got nail polish on her. What do you think of that?"

"Oh, she's pretty, isn't she?" The baby moved. "My gosh," said the mother. "She's got her little tongue out."

"Come on, sweetie," she held the baby.

David muffled his sobs and climbed on to a soft chair.

He sat on his hands.

"No, no, David," his mother said. "Put your hands out, so her head won't fall back."

He put his hands at his side, and the baby was placed across his stomach.

GRAND LIGNE MISSION
general secretary, Rev. H. C. Wilkinson, Montreal, will lead a special missionary service in Douglas Street Baptist Church Tuesday at 7.30 p.m. Mr. Wilkinson will preach on the mission's work among churches of Quebec, in Feller College, and in the radio ministry from Peace River, Alta., and Granby, Que.

Two Japanese United Church Pastors Arrive

TORONTO (BUP)—Two Japanese ministers have arrived in Canada, the first ever sent here to serve the Japanese members of the United Church, it was announced today.

Japan has been receiving Canadian missionaries since the church union in 1925, but Tadashi Mitsui, 25, and Nozomu Furuya, 28, are the first Japanese to return the visit. Both ministers speak English and will serve in Vancouver, the church said.

Rev. Mitsui, the son of a United Church minister in Japan, is a 1956 graduate from the Tokyo Union Theological Seminary, while Rev. Furuya is a 1954 graduate.

A Canadian Japanese who recently perfected his Japanese at Yale University, Rev. Gordon S. Imai, has also entered the ministry of the United Church and will serve Japanese families in Montreal.

Family Union Red Cross Aim

NEW DELHI (AP)—The International Red Cross conference today voted 72 to 0 to step up efforts for the reunion of families broken up by "war, internal conflicts and political barriers."

There were five abstentions, including the United States government and Sweden. The U.S. Red Cross voted for the resolution.

Langford Baptist To Display Film

Selwyn Neal, Victoria, will conduct November services in Langford and Luxton Baptist churches.

Mr. Neal will speak at Langford Sundays at 11.15 a.m., and at Luxton, at 10 a.m. and 7 p.m. Moody Bible Institute of Science film, "Red River of Life," will be shown at Langford Church Sunday, Nov. 10, at 3 p.m. The public is invited.

Plate Collections Up Protestants Report

WASHINGTON (UP)—American Protestants are putting more money in their church collection plates.

The average American now donates $56.74 a year to his church—the highest per capita giving figure ever recorded by the national council of churches. This represents an increase of about 7 per cent over last year's figure.

The council compiles the latest available statistics on contributions to American religious denominations in November of each year.

The Roman Catholic church and Jewish bodies do not publish official figures on contributions, and are not included in the compilation.

Reports from 52 Protestant bodies this year showed total contributions of $2,041,908,161, an all-time record. Most of this money—81 per cent—was used for local congregational expenses, such as paying the minister's salary, enlarging or maintaining the church building and buying hymnals.

NEWS OF CITY CHURCHES

Cathedral in Search of Piano To Fill Gap Until Organ Ready

Christ Church Cathedral is looking for a grand piano.

In his weekly letter to parishioners Dean Brian Whitlow states that parts have arrived for rebuilding the cathedral organ and work will begin shortly.

"From the beginning of January for about 12 weeks we shall be without an organ," he said. "The church committee have discussed how we may best provide accompaniment for the services during that period and have decided... that the preferable solution would be by means of a grand piano."

A grand piano could fill the gap "very adequately," he said. The dean promised that a piano loaned for the interval would remain in the cathedral all the time "and the greatest care would, of course, be taken of it."

For his morning subject in First United Church, Rev. C. L. Straight has chosen "The Word for This World." Subject of Rev. A. I. Higgins at night will be "Three Heretics," the second in a series of Protestantism.

Holy Communion will be celebrated at 8 a.m. in Christ Church Cathedral followed by Choral Eucharist at 11 when Dean Brian Whitlow will preach. Rev. R. E. H. Howell will preach at Evensong. Holy Communion will be celebrated in James Bay Hall at 10 a.m.

Rev. A. C. Hamill will preach on "See the Christ as the Bread of Life" and "A Commended Life" at services in Emmanuel Baptist Church. Ordinance of the Lord's Supper will be observed at the close of the evening service.

"The Fourth Beatitude" will

New Stamps Honor Press, Centenary

OTTAWA (BUP)—The post office department will issue eight new stamps during 1958. The first stamp will be issued Jan. 22 and will pay tribute to the contribution of the Press to the nation's development.

In March there will be a special stamp featuring the International Geophysical Year. Another stamp, issued in May, will commemorate the centennial of British Columbia.

In September the department will issue a stamp to mark the discovery of oil.

The final stamp planned for the year will be issued in October to commemorate the bicentennial of the convening in Halifax of the first elected assembly to meet in what is now Canada.

Canadian artists are designing all these stamps.

A Sunday school class knows that every cent counts! As they listened to their teacher tell of another school group which had raised money for Korean war orphans, the little boys, all between six and eight, decided to start their own collection. Pennies, nickels and dimes rolled in, meaning a generous contribution of $3 to the Unitarian Service Committee, 78 Sparks Street, Ottawa.

be Dr. F. E. H. James' sermon subject at the morning service in Metropolitan United Church.

At night Rev. J. A. R. Tingley, district secretary of the British and Foreign Bible Society, will preach on "The Bible and You."

At St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Dr. J. L. W. McLean will preach on "Growing Old Successfully" and "What About Hell?" Morning service will be broadcast over CJVI.

Moody Science Institute film "Red River of Life" will be shown at evensong in St. John's Church, Canon George Biddle will preach in the morning on "The Word—the Seed."

For his subjects at Douglas Street Baptist Church Rev. Cecil Barner has chosen "I Am the Good Shepherd" and "A Call to Heroism."

Rev. R. E. S. Toms will speak in the Evangelistic Temple Sunday evening on "The Power and the Glory." His morning subject will be "Mystic Body."

At First Baptist Church, Rev. G. R. Easter will speak Sunday morning on "Why Sunday Observance?" His evening sermon is, by request, "The Reformation."

Rev. D. B. Carr will preach in Centennial United Church Sunday morning on "The Continuous Flame." Members of Bethel No. 2 and 27 of Job's Daughters and Victoria and Oak Bay Chapters of the Order of De Molay will attend the evening service when Mr. Carr will speak on "The Complete Life."

Dr. J. B. Rowell's subject at Central Baptist Church Sunday night will be "The Witch of Endor—Saul's Worst Night."

Victoria...In November!

In the crisply clear days of the first month of winter interesting visitors appear in the city and wedding bells ring out for charming young brides and their equally handsome grooms. There is much excitement in the air for this is a month of planning and of looking ahead to a festive season only weeks away.

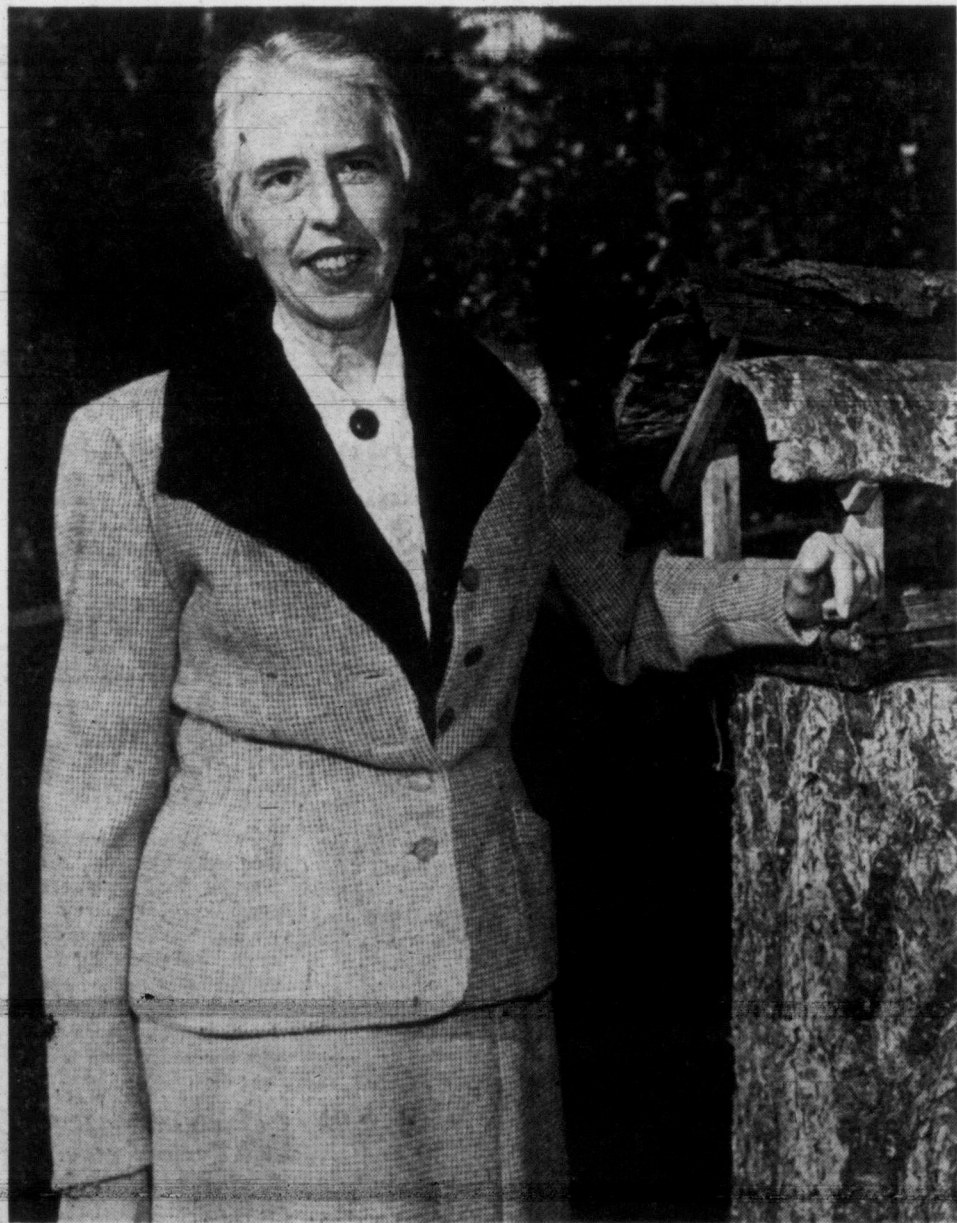

Mrs. Gladys W. Chapman, Supreme Queen of the Supreme Temple, Daughters of the Nile, will make an official visit to Miriam Temple No. 2 in Victoria on Saturday, Nov. 9. A ceremony in her honor is being planned by the local temple in Holyrood Hall, 2315 McBride Avenue, that afternoon at 3.30. A dinner will follow in the Monterey Restaurant. Mrs. Chapman's home is in San Antonio, Texas.

Because she loves the autumn in this part of the world, novelist Mrs. Reuben Morgan returned to Victoria. She is pictured in the garden of Lt.-Cmdr. and Mrs. James D. Laurie, Linkleas Avenue, with whom she is staying.

It's an Ideal Spot for Writing

By KITT DIXON

A well-known American author who finds Victoria conducive to writing has returned.

H. H. Lynde, whose latest book, "The Adversary," was published four months ago, is here this time to relax; not to write as she has done on previous visits.

"I always remember the Northwest autumn," said the writer, a native of Spokane, "and decided I wouldn't miss it this year. Autumn is never so beautiful at home in California."

In private life Mrs. Reuben Morgan, she is the guest of Lt.-Cmdr. and Mrs. James D. Laurie at their Linkleas Avenue home.

The writer received high praise for her new book, which concerns a mythical village in the back country of California.

Wrote Orville Prescott, New York Times critic:

"The Adversary" is altogether brilliant, a triumph of sheer story-telling and a thoughtful and thought-provoking examination of life and the pressures that help to mold it in the Atomic Age."

Mrs. Morgan is not what you would call a prolific writer.

"Ideas germinate for a long time," she said. "I like to let them simmer in my mind awhile before I use them."

She prefers to take her time with a novel, working regularly, but for just a few hours daily.

"People seem to think creative writing is merely a matter of working when inspiration comes," she said.

"To the contrary, it's exhausting work requiring regular periods each day. It simply can't be done in fits and jerks."

H. H. Lynde's second last book, "Which Grain Will Grow," was published five years ago. Previously she wrote the best seller, "The Slender Reed," and "Remember Matt Boyer."

While writing one of her earlier novels, Mrs. Morgan spent some time at Macdowall Colony, New Hampshire country home of composer Edgar Macdowall.

After his death, Macdowall's widow turned their estate into a retreat for creative artists. For nominal fees they can live in comfortable dormitories and work in private studios in quiet, beautiful surroundings.

"Macdowall found his country home an ideal spot in which to work, and it was his wish that it be made available to other artists. In fact, I believe he actually began making it ready for them before his death," said Mrs. Morgan.

When she leaves Victoria, Mrs. Morgan will travel east to consult with her publishers before returning to her home in La Jolla, Calif.

She is working on a new book, but not while on vacation.

"I will wait until I return to La Jolla and can put in regular hours on my writing," she said. "Right now I'm just enjoying myself."

'Dior by Dior' Gives Good Picture of Haute Couture

By NONA DAMASKE

The most famous name in the world of fashion has been that of Christian Dior. The average man in the street, who does not even notice his wife's new hat ... women who have only a desultory interest in high fashion and teenagers who live in skirts, sweaters and saddle shoes, all know that Dior was the man who pushed the whole fashion world into a spin.

This year he wrote a autobiography, "Dior by Dior". A few days before his death, the copy I had ordered was delivered to me. It is a wonderful story of haute couture from the time a dress is just a vague mental image in a man's mind until it is a breathtaking gown worn by a beautiful model in a luxurious salon.

Dior began the story by saying that he felt good luck had played a major role in his success. Fortune tellers are mentioned frequently and we are left with the impression that he put a great deal of stock in their predictions.

Indeed, it was a fortune teller who told him "you must create the house of Christian Dior ... nothing anyone will offer you later will compare with the chance which is open to you now."

So Maison Christian Dior was born.

The reader is taken through the difficulties of his early collections to the birth of "the new look."

Step by step "Mister Dior" revealed the behind scenes work that went into the creation of his exclusive designs, from the first sketch to the naming of each costume. He told of dress rehearsals, the press showings, and the final "day of days" — salon showing for buyers — when champagne always heralded another successful Dior collection.

In conclusion the great couturier wrote: "I am convinced that my finest memoirs are yet to come."

It seems a pity that now we will never share them.

I understand that the famed couture house is to continue its business. The doors of the lovely white and grey salons in Paris and New York are to remain open. Whether this is a good move or not, the whole fashion world will wish them well.

As time goes on, great fashion designers will still come and go but I have a feeling the name of Dior will never really be topped.

The fiery disposition, the independent spirit, the great imagination will become a legend.

Young designers wishing to gain fame and fortune will hitch their wagons to a shining star and it will be inscribed with the name "Mister Dior."

A classic suit in smart wool check with a matching longer fur-lined jacket, shown here loose at the waist, though slightly indented in front according to Christian Dior's winter silhouette. Two buttons, one above and one below the waist, are used as trimming. The small brimmed hat is in the same woollen fabric.

"Promesse" ... Two-piece dinner costume of imported polt de soie, designed by Christian Dior for his New York winter collection. The bow-front jacket covers a camisole-topped short evening dress.

Yugoslav Foods; Scenery, People Interest City's World Traveler

By NORMA MACDONALD

I have just completed 10 days in Yugoslavia, still little known to many people of the world, particularly those in our hemisphere.

I arrived in Belgrade by air from Munich to take part in the council meeting of our International Hotel Association. The first thing pointed out to us near the Belgrade Airport was a number of very modern apartment houses, which our hosts explained were for students only.

We spent three days in Belgrade, during which we were shown the beauties of the surrounding countryside.

Belgrade itself is not too interesting, being a more or less commercial city, although the seat of government. One of our trips was to Smederevo, the centre of the wine district. Grapes were at their height, and it was a lovely sight to see the farmers arriving at the co-operative centre to unload the grapes.

The main roads are excellent, but the one between Belgrade and Zagreb must be a driver's nightmare, as it runs for mile after mile straight across the country with only the occasional slight curve. I give great credit to our drivers who wheeled those heavy buses over 325 miles to Zagreb in time for a little tour through the city, and a cocktail party before we sat down to the excellent lunch with the Zagreb Hotel Association at 1.30 p.m.

SEES FAMED GROTTOS After a leisurely lunch we drove another 110 miles to reach Opatija on the coast. Here we spent the night, and the next morning were off again in the buses to see the Grottoes at Postojna. They run for miles under ground, were discovered in 1818, and are beautifully and attractively lighted. A long, narrow, snake-like train took us into the heart of them. Then we walked along the paths and the bridges spanning the deep gorges.

The largest opening in the caves, about the size of a small auditorium, has been made into a concert hall. Here we were given a concert by the Ljubljana Symphony, second oldest orchestra in Europe, founded in 1702. Afterward another excellent lunch by the town of Postojna.

I have certainly given my German a workout here, as many people do not speak English, but practically all speak German. In this part of Europe cart or wagons, seem to be the farmers most prized possessions — many, if not all of them, looking decidedly homemade. In the Black Forest of Germany, where I spent a week before coming here, a few of them were drawn by horses, a few by oxen, and the largest number by cows. Here, in Yugoslavia, most of them are drawn by horses. Early in the day they often have only the farmer and his wife in them, with perhaps a few cheap looking possessions, but late in the day at this time of the year, the roads are crowded with carts filled with golden ripe corn, or equally golden ripe pumpkins, or luscious green or blue grapes.

All animals have herdsman or women, (more often the latter) in attendance. Even one cow has an attendant, but I noticed in such cases the "sitter" usually added farm work to her duties.

Men and women work side by side in the fields. The women look drab in their dark work clothes, but their national costumes are the most beautiful and colorful in the world.

SECOND PHASE OF VISIT We were called at 5 a.m., and at 6 a.m. were on our way toward the mountains, and the Adriatic coast. All morning we drove through farming country passing mile after mile of cornfields, which is evidently their greatest crop. They let it ripen in the fields, using the stalks for fodder, and the kernels for meal.

Every 50 miles or so we passed stands of beautiful forest land, sprinkled with lovely little lakes, or large ponds. The animals were very fine — herds of cows, flocks of sheep, and of geese, litters of pigs. The cows were most interesting, many of them with wide, wild looking horns. The most interesting of them were the rare pure white ones.

Homes are quite attractive — most of them white with red tiled roofs. Bunches of red peppers and strings of yellow corn hung on the wall of the house to ripen in the sun added to the appearance. Most of the houses seemed to be electrified, but I saw no TV aerials. The quaint old wells outside the houses have not been replaced by modern water pipes either.

TODAY'S RECIPE

CRANBERRY COBBLER

One and a half cups prepared baking mix; 1/2 cup and 1 tablespoon light cream; 2 tablespoons grated orange rind; 1/4 cup granulated sugar; 2 tablespoons cornstarch; 1/2 cup cold water; 1 tablespoon butter; 1 can (1-lb.) whole cranberry sauce; 2 tablespoons orange juice; 2 tablespoons granulated sugar.

Heat oven to 400 degrees F. Mix together with a fork prepared baking mix, light cream and orange rind. Set aside. In saucepan combine 1/4 cup sugar and cornstarch. Add cold water slowly, stirring until smooth. Add butter and whole cranberry sauce. Bring mixture to a boil and cook, stirring constantly until thickened (about 3 min.). Pour into an 8" x 8" buttered baking dish. Drop baking mix dough in spoonfuls on top of cranberry mixture (either six large spoonfuls or 8 small spoonfuls). Combine orange juice and 2 tablespoons sugar. Pour about 1 teaspoon of this mixture over each spoonful of dough. Bake in 400 degrees F. oven 25 minutes. Serve warm in sauce dishes. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

What to Do for a Cold? Prevent Complications

Half the population will suffer from more than one cold this year. Only about 10 per cent escape at least one annual bout with the sniffles. Although a cold is not serious unless secondary complications arise, no malady is quite so annoying.

The running nose, the hacking cough, the sore throat and weeping eyes and the bronchial wheeze are not only the most unattractive conditions imaginable, but just about the most miserable.

Regardless of all the amazing discoveries of science, the cause of colds remained a mystery for years. It is suspected that a virus is the culprit and that the offender is always present in the throat but does not attack until our resistance is weakened by some factor. Other bacteria such as pneumonia may also be present but get the upper hand only after the tissues and membranes have become susceptible to them because of a cold.

Regardless of what one does, a cold usually runs its course. The main thing is to avoid complications. The treatment is much the same as ever. You should go to bed, eat a light diet, drink liquids copiously. Antihistamines seem to relieve some folks, but these should be taken only when your doctor prescribes them. If your symptoms persist past the usual length of time for a cold, if your fever rises or you have any unusual occurrences, you should call your physician. An ounce of prevention and care is well worth while. It is foolish to tempt the more serious complications which sometimes follow a cold.

As to prevention, our best bets are habits of life which keep our health at a high level. The right food and plenty of sleep, and exercise help keep our resistance strong.

The habit of keeping rooms too hot weakens our defences. Moderately warm homes and offices and sufficiently heavy clothing for the cold outdoors should be a part of your preventive measures. Naturally, whenever possible, you should avoid those who have a cold. If a member of your family is a victim, destroy the tissues he uses and keep the patient as isolated as feasible.

I hope you at least cut down on your quota this year. I have quoted in this column the fact that a large dose of vitamin A, if taken at the first sign of a cold, works like magic with some people.

Others do not respond to this therapy. It does no one any good after the cold has gotten a real hold. You might ask your doctor about this.

Mr. and Mrs. William Stuart Mackay Piped From St. John's Church

Happy newlyweds, Mr. and Mrs. William Stuart Mackay, were piped from St. John's Anglican Church, Friday evening, by Ian Duncan.

The church was decorated with white chrysanthemums in copper containers for the service, conducted by Canon George Biddle.

Given in marriage by her great-uncle, William Dolphin, the bride, Dianne Valerie, daughter of Mrs. Elsie Winter, wore a full-length portrait gown of pure silk, styled with fitted bodice and sweeping skirt, in train, with puffed gathers' accenting side panels. Delicate lace and sequin embroidery trimmed the bodice and bustle.

A Juliet cap held the bride's face veil of illusion tulle and she carried a bouquet of red roses, white carnations and heather. For "something old" she wore a gold "keeper" ring belonging to her grandmother, the late Mrs. James Dolphin.

Matron of honor Mrs. L. J. Mottershead, cousin of the bride; bridesmaids Misses Maurine Pedneault and Dorothy Stenberg, and junior bridesmaids Misses Marie Dempster, cousin of the bride, and Barbara Mackay, niece of the groom, were gowned alike in pastel shades of blue, pink, green, mauve and yellow, respectively.

Little Miss Donna Coles, flower girl, wore a white frock of the bride wore a beige sheath and carried a miniature bouquet with ribbons to match their picture hat trimmed with maribou. She wore an orchid corsage.

A. T. Buchanan was best man sage. Mother of the groom for the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Mackay, and George Denfeta in brown tone with "ashes nixon and Patrick Cornell were of roses" accessories. She also ushers. During the signing of had an orchid corsage.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST
MONDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1957
ARIES (March 21 to April 19)—You are so bubbling over with enthusiasm to get started on your fine ideas that you do not know which one to tackle. Once you know which one you desire most, the results will be fine all around. Be alive!
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20)—There are all sorts of private affairs that can be worked out properly today for your greater abundance and security. Don't procrastinate or rehash things in your mind. Act quickly, decisively. Get results!
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21)—Today you are at last appreciated for your remarkable ideas, inventiveness, etc., and everyone is eager to back you, close ties, salesmanship on right ones.
CANCER (June 22 to July 21)—Get an early start and see that fine person of influence who will extend the backing you have sought for so long. Then put your great gifts before those others who can help you com-mercialize them, also.
LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21)—Step out of dull-doldrum existence and watch how the other half lives. Read papers, watch great TV programs, acquire other valuable information. Meet wonderful people, be on the go, make this a banner day.
VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22)—Those who come with in your aura today will bring forth fine ideas and plans for a better future for you. Close ties will then be pleased and happy with your possibilities. Tonight, be happy and put romance on the menu.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22)—Keep busy a.m. and p.m. analyzing what others desire from your joint ventures. The right questions put wisely will clarify picture, bring out better modus operandi, and a chance to show your loyalty and affection.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21)—Begin the new week properly by rolling up your sleeves and pitching in earnestly to whatever needs doing, make more efficient, workable, improve health, charm, personality. Write.
See that follow-up letters are congenial.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21)—If turned to your stellar influences you awaken feeling aces and you get a bank out of whatever it is you have to do today. If out of tune, you are stymied, so relax and meditate, restore your forces and energies.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20)—You have only to tap the source of your inspiration and strength to know how better to add to your security and make life more successful now. Take family ties in your confidence, gain their love and respect.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19)—This is a day when you can accomplish so many things—repairs at home, cleaned, correspondence caught up, shopping for staples and baubles, cleaning, clinching deals with right persons, etc. Keep busy!
PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20)—Real estate and personal holdings should be the things to occupy time until today, for your future security and success depend upon your activity now. Get books in order, voice in the pink of condition.
IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN MONDAY...
The alive and alert youngster born Monday is the impetuous kind whose action immediately follows thought. This is a wonderful horoscope since the mentality is very great and pioneering as is natural as breathing. The "neverfail" detective is here, the scientist who will give the world greater hope, etc. Show others your appreciation of fine progeny's exceptional talents, and you gain support for your child.

Smart New Headgear For Canadian Army

Canadian soldiers are to get a classy new forage cap—color blue—to replace the old beret which made them famous in the Second World War.

It will have a black patent leather visor, similar in shape to an officer's peaked cap, and a black chin strap.

The band around the new cap will be in the soldier's corps colors.

Reaction at Work Point Barracks today was favorable.

"It is much more becoming and easier to wear," one officer said. "I have talked to a number of soldiers and most of them are all for it."

Said a member of the garrison staff:

"It will certainly be an improvement on the flat peaked cap with the soft brim that was issued to Canadians during the Korean War."

"Many lads I know have been hoping for a new dress cap for some time."

The new hat is to be issued to all soldiers as soon as sufficient numbers can be manufactured. The familiar beret will still be worn for routine duties, but will be replaced by the forage cap for walking out and ceremonial parades. A blue dress uniform is already available to Canadian soldiers but they have to buy it. The blue cap, which can be worn either with this or battle dress, will be regular issue.

The new cap has already been issued to the Regiment of Canadian Guards, which has two battalions at Camp Petawawa.

Italy Nabs Leaders In Drug Ring

ROME (AP)—Italian police have jailed two brothers they consider major links in a narcotics chain that extended from Turkey to the United States and Canada.

One of the brothers—Salvatore Caneba—was deported from the United States as undesirable in 1953. He and his brother, Vincenzo, were taken into custody by police in a Rome financial office they had established.

Police said the office served as a cover for the narcotics trade that passed from the Middle East through Italy to Switzerland, Canada and United States. The specialty was heroin.

The two brothers have been taken from Rome and jailed in Milan's San Vittore prison, pending trial, for which no date has been set.

Other members of the ring were arrested some time ago in Switzerland, where police co-operated with Italian officials and U.S. narcotics officers.

Islands 'Danger Zone'

LONDON (AP)—The admiralty notified mariners in the Pacific today that an area around Christmas Island has been declared a danger zone in which hydrogen bomb tests will be carried out beginning in mid-November.

MASKED MEN ROB CNR OPERATOR

WYOMING, Ont. (CP)—Two masked men overpowered the night telegraph operator at the Canadian National Railways station early today, tied him up with a clothes line and made off with $405 in railway money and $75 belonging to the operator.

Station agent R. E. Dick said the men also cut telephone lines out of the station but failed to sever the railway's telegraph lines.

Five Climbers Die In Plunge From Peak

BERCHTESGADEN, Germany (UP)—Five persons fell to their death on jagged rocks on the 2,000-metre Untersberg near here Friday in Bavaria's worst mountain tragedy of the year. Mountain police said two German army soldiers and three young girls died after a fall from the peak's south wall. All five bodies were recovered.

Bank of Montreal Marks 100th Anniversary Sunday

Sunday marks the 140th birthday of banking in Canada.

Canada's first bank, whose later role, in the development of the far west is part of the history of B.C., the Bank of Montreal was founded on that day in 1817 by nine Montreal merchants who saw the need for banking facilities to develop the colonial economy and to facilitate trade.

Known as the "Montreal Bank" in its earliest days, it began with a capital of $250,000 and a staff of seven.

From the enterprise and foresight of the original nine Montreal merchants, has grown the present Bank of Montreal, with 721 offices from coast to coast in Canada and abroad, including 101 in B.C., with assets in excess of $2,700,000,000, and a staff of some 12,000 men and women.

In 1817, the region that was to become British Columbia was merely a wilderness, prized for its furs, but populated only by Indians and white traders and hunters.

Back east, development was only a few stages further advanced. The Canadian colonies were primitive settlements and the entire population numbered only about 500,000.

With no native Canadian currency, trade was largely conducted by barter, although some foreign exchange circulated. As a result, trade as we know it today was practically non-existent.

One of the first decisions of the original nine Montreal merchants who established the B of M was to issue their own bills and coins, and this innovation did much to stabilize and accelerate trade.

Despite popular misgivings, the bank's directors had the vision to finance the original Canadian Pacific Railway venture. In 1887, the first train rumbled into Vancouver and within a few weeks of that date the B of M's first B.C. branches were opened in Vancouver and Victoria.

Prayers for Hungry

VATICAN CITY (UP)—The city newspaper Osservatore Romano asked the world's Catholics today to pray "for the living and the dead" in oppressed Hungary on the anniversary of the bloody Russian repression.

ISLAND VIEWPOINT

Behold: A Ruin

COWICHAN LEADER — The charm of a ruin is hard to describe. It was of interest, therefore, to receive from a skilled stonemason from Victoria the opinion that the beauty of the Old Stone Church, Cowichan Hill, will be marred if complete restoration of the building is carried out.

After inspecting the Cowichan tourist attraction—who can deny that it is?—the Victorian outlined his program for the church. He would point up the masonry carefully. He would place a cement cap over all upward exposed parts, dirtying his mortar to blend with aged appearance of the building. He would replace those beams and shingles in need of it.

What we have all been staring at for some months now with pangs of regret and almost of embarrassment appears to a trained eye to be a beautiful ruin. The Victorian may have done the district a real service by passing on his comments at this time.

Road Improvement

SIDNEY REVIEW—Recent announcement by John D. Tisdale, Saanich MLA, that the provincial government has decided to re-route and reconstruct the northern portion of Patricia Bay Highway leading to Swartz Bay ferry wharf has caused some genuine joy not only on the Saanich Peninsula but on the Gulf Islands as well. It is taken for granted that the major highway construction job is necessitated by steadily increasing traffic on ferries using Swartz Bay terminal. The fact that the government is preparing to spend a large sum on the road construction is tantamount to an assurance that the substantial subsidy for ferry travel will be continued indefinitely.

The highway northward from the airport to Swartz Bay has been inadequate for many years. Traffic over it has increased considerably recently because of more cars using the new Land's End Highway around the north of the peninsula. But the major increase in travel has unquestionably come as a direct result of the expanding ferry services. Now that expensive rights-of-way have been acquired by the highways department, a start at actual construction should not be delayed too long. For unless we miss our guess the graph of traffic using this vital piece of highway has just started to spurt upwards.

Aid to Tolerance

COURTENAY ARGUS—A suggestion mooted here for some time of forming a ministerial association seems worthy of active pursuit.

In the past year, we've heard the idea proposed from more than one source, including ministers and laymen.

Reasons given for formation of an association of ministers have been varied but they boil themselves down mainly into, first, an opportunity for joint action by all churches when a community need arises (Hungarian relief was a case in point a while back); second, an opportunity for fellowship among ministers; and third, an opportunity for communal exchange and co-operation between ministers to eliminate any suggestion the only relationship existing between different churches is one of competitive spirit.

LLOYD DICKSON, LOGGER, DIES OF INJURIES

DUNCAN—A Lake Cowichan logger, Lloyd Robert Dickson, 31, died in hospital Friday an hour after having been admitted for treatment of injuries suffered at his work with Slaney Logging Co. He was born in Kenora, Ont., and lived at Meade Creek, Copper Canyon, and Port McNeill before settling in Lake Cowichan a year ago. A widow, son, and two daughters survive.

Funeral service will be held Tuesday.

Careless Driving Brings $30 Fine

NANAIMO (CP)—A Burnaby bridge worker Friday was fined $30 and had his driver's licence suspended for three months for driving without due care and attention.

Mervin E. Conger was arrested after the automobile he was driving ran off an embankment at the approach to the overhead bridge at Nanaimo early Friday. He was treated in Nanaimo General Hospital for cuts and bruises.

Tiny Planes at Rustic Airport In Saanich Boon to Businessman

By DON INGHAM

A group of Victorians flying out of the Butler-Howroyd field on Keating Crossroad in Central Saanich is proving that all aviation is not smashing the sound barrier and heading for the moon.

These pilots are civilians who have built a whole new way of life around aircraft that will not fly from here to Montreal in a jiffy, climb to 20,000 feet in five minutes, or do slow rolls off the top of a loop.

They are just humble little flivver planes that will take Joe Spivak and his wife and kids to Chilliwack for the afternoon, to Portland on a business trip, or to San Francisco for an overnight trip, jogging along at a comfortable 110 to 120 miles per hour. They also permit a man to work on the mainland and live here without being a millionaire, or set up a business anywhere within two hours' flying time from here, which takes in a generous circle.

There are private plane owners aplenty on Vancouver Island, but the biggest concentration is at the field operated jointly by Claude Butler and Joe Howroyd.

It started in 1953 when Mr. Butler bought property adjacent to the gravel pit owned by his firm, mainly to protect the pit. While flying over it one day with Mr. Howroyd, he suggested that with a little care an aircraft could be landed there. Later on it was decided that if Mr. Howroyd would buy the adjacent property and cut some trees down, it might be easier still.

Others became interested, a great deal of volunteer work was done—mainly by Butler Bros. and Copley Bros.' equipment—and by 1955 a strip 1,950 feet long was being used by a handful of private plane owners who gradually came to own 18 aircraft.

"It is ideal for the small aircraft," Mr. Howard said. "Each owner can have his own hangar if he wishes, and keep his own supplies of gas and oil. The landing area is turf, which is much easier on tires than concrete, and traffic is much lighter."

The field helps to keep the air at Patricia Bay clear for flying students, commercial aircraft, and navy planes. "There are no 'satellite' fields in Vancouver, and the pressure on Sea Island Airport is terrific," he said.

Planes flown from the little field are Stinsons, Cessnas, Corvairs, Taylorcrafts, Supercoisers, a Cub, Aerona, Ercoupe, and one Twin Navion.

Planes Aid Owners Run Far-Flung Businesses

The owners include Mr. Butler, who is able to look after a logging camp at Sooke, building supply house in Central Saanich, contracting firm in Duncan, and a building business on the Mainland through daily use of his Navion.

Wes Colbank's Stinson lets him live here and run a plumbing business in Victoria, Powell River, and Courtenay.

Pete Jeffrey, Dave Hancock and Bruce McLeod have their planes primarily to build up time toward commercial licences, while Jack Arnaud, Doug Dicker, Mark Knisley, Barney Oldfield, Maurice Johnson, Jack Plant and Brian Ross have their light planes purely for fun.

Jerry Ball uses his, commuting between his home here and his job in Vancouver, and Mel Price and Morris Kersey are professionals who keep their own private planes at the Keating strip. Rudy Kwram, whose plane was stolen earlier this year and recovered near Spokane, is inactive pending completion of repairs to his Stinson.

It is a free and easy little operation, but despite the bucolic touch of aircraft moored under the apple trees, all the customary safety rules are observed on takeoffs, landings and taxiing.

At its northern end the ground falls away over a gravel bank to Keating Crossroad. Landings are made from north to south, uphill, and for takeoffs the aircraft go down hill from south to north.

Central, Butte Lakes Foot Trail Meets Approval

Recreation Minister Earle Westwood has approved plans submitted by the Outdoor Club of Victoria and Victoria section, Alpine Club of Canada, for construction of a foot trail and camp sites between Great Central and Butte Lakes.

Members will do construction work, and the government will pay the estimated cost of $1,000. Mr. Westwood said.

The trail will provide a view of 1,443-foot Della Falls, highest waterfall in Canada.

GROTON, Conn. (AP)—The keel of another nuclear-powered submarine was laid Friday in the shipyard where the three operating U.S. atomic subs were born.

The new $39,000,000 submarine, to be built by General Dynamics Corporation, will be called the Scorpion.

$4,000 Price Of Halloween Window Trick

NANAIMO—More than $4,000 damage was done to plate glass windows in downtown stores by Halloween vandals with glass cutters.

Merchants said 12 expensive windows were badly scratched and may have to be replaced. A $100 reward has been offered for the apprehension of persons who wrecked a concession stand at Harewood immediately following a community bonfire and fireworks display.

Casher of Stolen Cheques Sought

NANAIMO (CP)—Police here have been asked to watch for a man who recently cashed two of 200 payroll cheques stolen two months ago at Richmond.

They said the man used the cheques at Chinese stores in Victoria to purchase goods. He told the operators he would return the following day for the balance of money due to him.

Officers said a cheque protector stolen with the cheques from Narod, Dawson and Haul Limited in Richmond has been recovered in Manitoba.

Vote on Hospital Set for Jan. 18

COBBLE HILL—Jan. 18 has been set tentatively as the date for a hospital plebiscite at Lake Cowichan and in the unorganized portion of School District 65.

Ratepayers will be asked if they favor formation of hospital improvement districts for their respective areas. If there is an affirmative vote, trustees will be elected, who will learn from the people the type of hospitalization they desire.

C. R. Eldred will be returning officer for the portion of School District 65, and William Chappell will act for the village of Lake Cowichan and the unorganized portion of School District 66, which will be combined in one area.

Arrangements were made by delegations from the two areas who met in the office of the chief electoral officer in Victoria Friday night. Members were L. J. Plater, president, Lake Cowichan Hospital Association; G. E. Wilson, association secretary; Mr. Chappell, Lake Cowichan village clerk; Nelson Laforge, president, Lake Cowichan Ratepayers' Association; G. E. Bonner, Miss C. M. Bonner and Mr. Eldred, all of Cobble Hill branch, Vancouver Island Ratepayers' Association.

The action constitutes a new start in arrangements for improved hospital services in the Duncan-Lake Cowichan area.

King's Daughters' Hospital in Duncan is overcrowded and obsolete, and the hospital board is anxious to erect a new building. B.C. Hospital Insurance Service agrees, and is in favor of a large hospital in Duncan to service both Duncan and Lake Cowichan areas.

Play Acting Not Child's Play For Serious-Minded Actress

By AUDREY S.T.D. JOHNSON

Olive Keane only inherited the latter part of her name when she married her husband, John. Just the same it fits her to a "t."

Speaking of it's, golf is one of her prime interests; and gardening. Another is acting, or any aspect of the theatre, amateur and professional. And when Olive is interested, Olive is, in fact, and if she'll pardon the pun, keen.

Playing an important lead in the production, Mrs. Keane is bringing to the rehearsals all the energy, vitality, learning and native skill at her command. But while these attributes are hers, they are not reserved exclusively for the benefit of her own part.

She unreservedly shares her knowledge and directs her energy toward the support and encouragement of less experienced players.

A forthright and outspoken person, her compliments are as sincere as her criticism, and incidentally, her opinions are strongly individualistic. Part of her value in a cast, as any good director such as Mrs. Dulmage will discover, is her loyalty and her professional attitude.

In contrast to too many amateurs in the theatre, Mrs. Keane regards preparation of a play as business—serious, absorbing with strong overtones of pleasure.

What makes the amateur theatre amateur in its truest—and worst—sense is a preponderance of the opposite viewpoint—all for pleasure; recreation with the vaguest possible overtones of business.

Mrs. Keane has given several outstanding characterizations to Theatre Guild history: the battle-axe mother in the 1957 drama festival production of Coward's "Fumed Oak"; the irascible old lady in the wheel chair in "The Silver Whistle"; and Catherine Sloper's romantically minded aunt in the Dominion Drama Festival regional winning production of "The Heiress."

ALL ASPECTS

She takes the building of her part beyond the stage of line-study and rehearsal, often making costumes, sometimes designed with the help of her artist husband. She does her own make-up, is diligent in unearthing odd properties.

If she is not happy with a director she will still co-operate but her disapproval of some aspects is not something she can always hide.

To the public who see her in performances of "The Mousetrap" from November 23 to 30, she will doubtless bring the pleasure and satisfaction of a skilled characterization.

As to her castmates, some of whom are new to Theatre Guild, but almost all of whom are considerably experienced, Mrs. Keane will have demonstrated for them afresh that zeal to excel and refusal to recognize any strict limitation in the amateur status which can bring local productions almost indistinguishably close to the pro sphere.

MUSIC MAKER

By BOB THOMAS

NEW YORK (AP)—"I'm not married any longer, so why shouldn't I work as hard as I can?" Idleness breeds mischief or, depression, so I'm going to keep busy.

This was Ginger Rogers' explanation of why she is making two important moves in her career:

1. Playing her first night club since she was a youngster in Galveston;

2. Returning to a stage musical for the first time since 1930. Obviously her marriage to Jacques Bergerac is finished. But she isn't moping.

"Las Vegas has been after me to play there for five years," she said. "But I chose to go back to night clubs in a brand-new hotel in Havana because it was new. I'd be the first star to appear there. I'm looking for new challenges."

NO BUTTONS

It was suggested that also the money was good.

"I don't work for buttons," she commented.

"Starting Jan. 28, I begin touring for a year in the national company of Bells Are Ringing," she continued. "Now you might ask why I do the show when it isn't new."

the past few months and I felt none of them was good enough to come into New York. But 'Bells,' which Judy Holliday did originally—and very well—is something that fits me."

"I'm going to see how hard the show is on me," she added. "If it's not too bad, I may make a picture while the show is running in Los Angeles."

What?

"Sure. What's so hard about that?"

"When I was appearing in Girl Crazy here in 1930, I made five movies and thought nothing of it."

SLEEP EN ROUTE

"My one luxury was a chauffeur and limousine. He'd pick me up at my home on Long Island at 6 in the morning, and I'd sleep all the way to the Paramount Studio in Astoria. I'd do a day's shooting and then be driven to the Alvin Theatre that night."

"I just had time to change from movie make-up into my stage make-up and then go on. I didn't think much of it. It was just like having a party every night. The only trouble the same people were at the party each time."

The role in "Compulsion" modeled after the late Clarence Darrow will be played in Meyer Levin's forthcoming drama by Frank Conroy. This is the play based on Levin's best-selling novel which is about Chicago's Loeb-Leopold murder case of the early 1920's. Darrow was the defence attorney.

Genius of Hornist Survives on Discs

By HUMPHRY DAVY

The life of one of England's great musicians was cut short last month when Dennis Brain, a phenomenal player of the French horn, died in a highway accident.

The artist, 36, had a weakness

if you can call it that—speed.

He was on his way home from the Edinburgh Festival when his car skidded on a damp road and crashed.

Dennis Brain came from a family of musicians who have been playing in England for three generations. At least five members of his family are and

Aubrey Brain, being equally as famous.

It's unfortunate that Brain did not make too many records.

His last disc, unless Angel is withholding others for release

at some later date, is a performance of Richard Strauss' two

panied by the Philharmonia

Orchestra with Wolfgang

Sawallisch conducting.

This record will give you some idea of the musician's ability. It's a staggering performance.

There is another record of his worth acquiring. On this disc

35092).

Anyone who likes folk songs sung in the traditional manner, that is without instrumental accompaniment, will derive much pleasure from "The English Singers," (Angel 35461).

This group of six musicians who are known in Canada and the United States, sing madrigals, ballads and folk songs of four centuries.

William Byrd (1543-1623);

Thomas Morley (1558-1603);

Gustave Holst (1874-1934) and

Ralph Vaughan Williams

be interesting to hear them

arranged for orchestra and vocalist.

POPS LIBRARY: For those who like jazz, this month's pick is "Jazz Goes to Junior College"

—the Dave Brubeck Quartet,

(Columbia C1084). It's sure to be a big hit with the younger generation.

The disc features five of Brubeck's interpretations recorded from

COURT DECIDES DUPAS CAN BOX AS WHITE MAN

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Ralph Dupas, third-ranking lightweight contender, Thursday night won his court battle to live and box in Louisiana as a white man.

Judge Rene A. Viosca of Civil Court ordered the New Orleans Health Department to issue Dupas a birth certificate listing his parents as white.

If the judge had declared Dupas' parents Negro, the boxer would not have been allowed to fight white men. Louisiana's segregation laws forbid mixed bouts.

The race of the 21-year-old boxer was first questioned publicly last April when Mrs. Lucretia Gra-violet, former registrar of births for neighboring Plaquemines Parish, appeared before the Louisiana State Athletic Commission.

She told the commission the boxer's real name was Ralph Duplessis and she had registered him at birth as a Negro.

SIDELINE SLANTS

BY

Doug Peden

Clem Crowe appears to be only two yards away from peace-ful dreams for the next two nights.

Although he sends his B.C. Lions out for the final 1957 game against Winnipeg Blue Bombers tonight, it is doubtful if the outcome of that struggle at Empire Stadium—unless the Bombers pull the unexpected and clobber the bejabbers out of the Leos—will do much to disturb Clem's slumber.

But the memory of six linear feet on Calgary's Mewata Stadium could do just that.

Even if the Lions win tonight, they will still finish up one point behind Calgary Stampeders and out of a Western Inter-provincial Football Union playoff berth for the fourth consecu-tive year.

Win or lose tonight, Uncle Clem will still be in the tradition-ally uncomfortable position of coach of a last-place club when Lion directors meet Monday night to decide if they want to offer him a contract for 1958. And since he has stated bluntly that he wants to return, these could be a couple of fitful nights in which to think of the two strides that would have shoved the Lions into a playoff berth and almost certainly have kept the wolves away from his door.

If the meeting had been held in mid-season, Crowe would not have had a chance. But things were breaking his way when the Lions made their belated bid with three wins and a tie and now he seems to have at least an even chance.

The time we wouldn't have given a broken penny for Crowe's chances of being hired again was right after the game in Regina when he gambled with one quarterback—Topsy Vann—against the Rough Riders.

Clem Stuck Out Neck—Almost Lost It

It was something coaches just don't do, somewhat akin to Casey Stengel sending his Yankees into a key game with only one pitcher in uniform.

Clem knew he was sticking his neck out in his attempt to get greater depth in the rest of his backfield. He almost had it chopped off when Vann was injured and carried off Taylor Field, leaving the Lions in the unique position of being a pro-fessional team without a regular quarterback in action.

Lions lost that one—their fourth defeat in five games—and impatient Vancouver fans made Crowe their No. 1 target. The "Crowe must go" howls were muffled by the garrison fil-berish, but until Monday's meeting you can bet the football filberts will be tossing the Vann incident and other Crowe mistakes around like hot potatoes.

Still, the incident that must be haunting Clem came in the Lions' third game, Leading, 20-7, at Calgary, the Leos started the second half with a march down the field. They went for a touchdown on third down, missed, and gave up the ball on downs only two yards from pay dirt.

If they had scored then, they would have won instead of losing a 22-20 heart-breaker. And it would have been a four-point-er—two more for Lions and two less for the Stamps. That two yards would have put the Lions in the playoffs, as things turned out, and almost certainly have made Crowe's job secure.

For a man who may be unemployed in three days, Clem Crowe is credited with some strangely forthright statements. He says he's convinced the current Lions are the best team Van-couver has ever had and were as good as any other WIFU squad except the Eskimos.

Injuries and the fact that the club picked the wrong times to play its poorest games—three times against Calgary—get the blame for keeping the Lions out of the playoffs.

Lion Fans Want to Howl Next Year

Fans looking at the Leos' record may think otherwise, but experts around the Western Conference also lend support to the claim, and a good number rate Crowe right behind Winni-peg's Bud Grant among the coaches.

Regardless of who handles the reins, Vancouver fans want a playoff club in 1958. After four fruitless years, they are starving for a winning team. And they want one good enough to be a contender for the western berth in the Grey Cup classic in their own Empire Stadium. They want to howl in B.C.'s centennial year.

Although Crowe looked like a gone gosling six weeks ago, Vancouverites have simmered down and appear ready to accept the fact that changing coaches won't work miracles. Unless the directors have lined up a pilot with a proven record, they'll do a lot of thinking before they leap. Darrell Royals and Pop Iyys don't come along every day.

Clem had the Lions rolling in the final part of the sched-ule. Given the horses he might be the man to drive the club up the ladder next year. He knows his players and the Cana-dian game and this looks like as good a time as any for the directors to give the Lions some of the stability they have al-ways needed.

Nobody is going to beat the Eskimos as long as Jackie Parker, Normie Kwong, Johnny Bright and company are around. But under Crowe, the Lions could be great in '58. If not Clem, who else?

HANS KNOWS HOW COLIN FEELS

By HANS GRUBER
Conductor, Victoria Symphony Orchestra

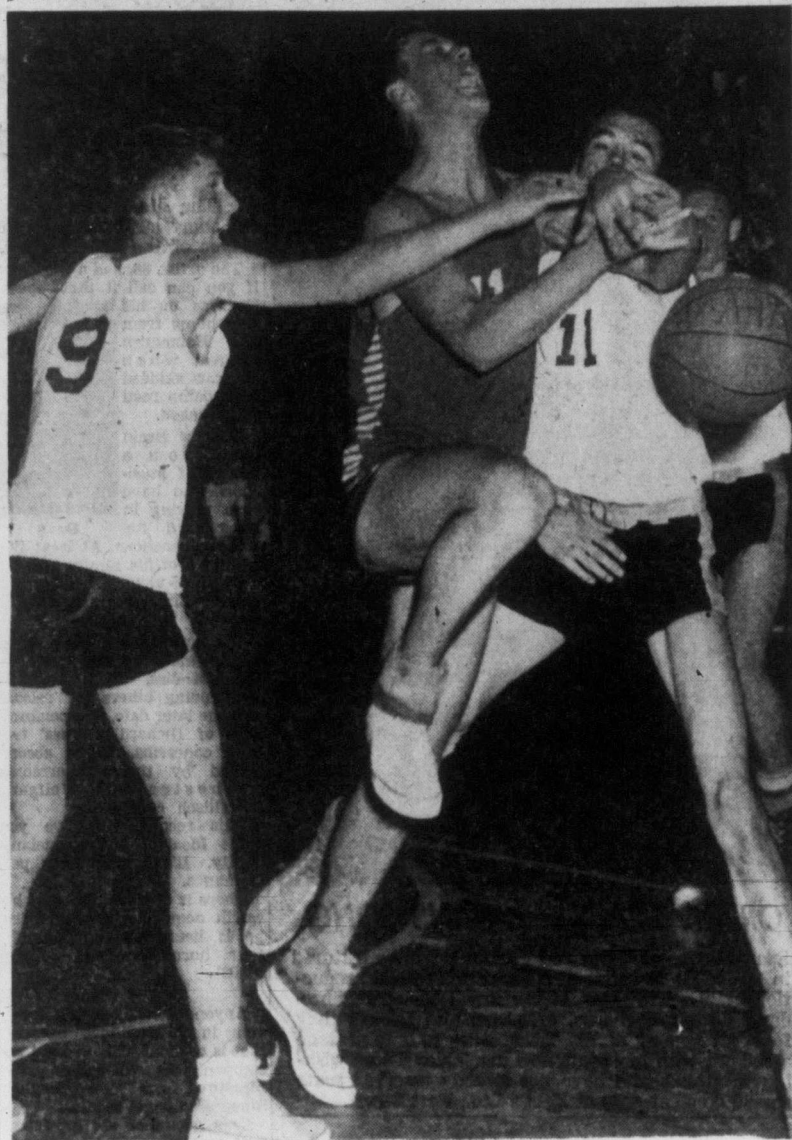

I ought to be writing this week, and on another page, about Mendelssohn, Bach and Sir William Walton, Brahms, and other great composers, and hear their music on Sun-day and Tuesday, Nov. 10 and 12, at the Royal Theatre.

Instead, I choose to pursue my notorious penchant for poking my nose where there may be no unanimous agree-ment as to its belonging. This time, it's hockey.

Regard this, if you will, as an open letter to Colin Kil-burn. I am very much with you, in spirit, Colin—and, of course, present in the flesh at the arena at every possible occasion—and I understand what it means to lose to for-midable opponents.

We also engage periodically in public contest, except that we "play" Bach and Brahms and Sibelius and Mozart—one at a time, to be sure, but we have yet to win in our un-equal struggle. You are in a more fortunate position, so do not fret, for I have not yet won, and several of your opponents, and you are not only far more closely related equals than we can ever hope to be to ours—events will prove that you are, in fact, superior to most of them.

However, I am sure that you have the self-confidence to know that, and the ability and courage to mould a team which is going to make the law of averages fall your way. For these first few games were nothing but a cruel twist to that law, disregarding even the flu and injuries. There will be, by that same inexor-

Les Won't Even Discuss Offer Made to PCL Clubs

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP)—Negotiators for the Pacific Coast Baseball League and the National League Giants and Dodgers scheduled new talks today after a late session Fri-day night.

The meeting broke up with O'Connor and six PCL club of-ficials over indemnities.

The six-member PCL nego-tiating committee was picked after a day-long session of the full PCL directorate to work out the thorny problems of a new coast league makeup and the question of damages to be demanded from the National League for invading San Fran-cisco and Los Angeles.

O'Connor said after the night meeting that there was no dis-cussion of court action but he would hold that power in re-serve if a settlement isn't reached.

The PCL directors empowered O'Connor to go into court if necessary to seek indemnities for disrupting the league.

O'Connor told reporters the PCL has no intention of trying to prevent Giants and Dodgers from playing in California next season.

"The whole effort now is to get just payment," he said. He and Fred David, president of the Sacramento club, said neither Stoneham nor Bavasi had made any money offer.

O'Connor said whether the PCL can operate next year de-pends on finding new cities for the San Francisco, Los Angeles and Hollywood franchises.

PLAN 12 TEAMS
Possible expansion of the league to 12 teams arose Friday and O'Connor said the possi-bility of a 12-club league would be thoroughly aired.

"The league won't be stronger unless we have 12 clubs," he said. "I can't say what cities would be involved because some of them are already in leagues."

O'Connor said that some of the cities already mentioned as replacing San Francisco and Los Angeles, new homes of the Giants and Dodgers, just don't have the population yet to make the league a triple A or open status, which it now is. He specifically mentioned Salt Lake City, Phoenix, Ariz., and Spo-kane, Wash.

In the girls' events, Janie Wheaton won the breaststroke and Jay Botterell placed second. The team travels to Bremer-ton for another gala tonight.

Bait Tasty Bit If Cougars Bite

Americans Bow; Canucks Visit Victoria Tonight

Victoria Cougars, who al-ways seem to pack their best punch against Vancou-ver into two periods, are hopeful of pacing them-selves for a route-going ef-fort against the unbeaten Canucks tonight.

Art Chapman's charges dangle their undefeated Western Hockey League string (seven games "long") in front of the hungry Cougars in Memorial Arena tonight. The scrap starts at 8.

And Cougars, who have dropped 3-2 (overtime) and 5-2 decisions to Vancouver earlier this season, appear hungry enough to take a vicious swing at the dangling bait.

Cougars have gone without a winning meal in eight starts. Canucks, by no means fat and content, have digested the sweet fruit of victory in six of their seven games. The bitter game ended in a draw.

THREE POINTS UP

Canucks' latest feast came at the expense of Seattle Amer-icans Friday night. It was a 2-0 decision that boosted Van-couver three points ahead of second-place New Westminster Royals in the Coast Division race.

Marcel Pelletier collected his second shutout of the season in Vancouver and only had 12 shots to stop to do it. Elliott Chorley and Bob Robinson scored for the winners.

The game saw the Seattle team badly outplayed by Van-couver with only exceptional work by goalie Hank Bassen preventing a rout. Bassen stopped 28 shots, many from point-blank range.

The Canuck rookie line of Orland Kurtenbach, Jim Pow-ers and Ron Hutchinson was the most impressive attacking unit. Kurtenbach time and again led his charges deep into Seattle territory only to be stopped by the great play of the Amer-icans' netminder.

Forward Art Hart and de-fenceman Bill Davidson showed the best spark for the badly-outclassed Seattle team.

Guyle Fielder, Seattle centre, missed the game. Fielder, the league's top scorer last year and recently cut by Detroit Red Wings of the National League, is still en route to Seattle for the east.

A standing-room crowd of 5,008 watched the game.

Bremerton Next Stop For Y Club

The powerful Washington Athletic Club toppled Victoria's Flying "Y" Swimming Club 65-37 Friday night in the first of two exhibition galas for the Vancouver Island team against Washington State clubs.

However, coach Archie Mc-Kinnon, who made the trip without several of his top swimmers, was well satisfied with his team's performance.

Bruce Warburton placed first in the boys' breaststroke and second in the freestyle. Bob Wheaton won the backstroke event, with Doug Dickie placing third, and the team of Warbur-ton, Wheaton, Dickie and Doug Patterson placed first in the freestyle relay.

In the girls' events, Janie Wheaton won the breaststroke and Jay Botterell placed second. The team travels to Bremer-ton for another gala tonight.

Flyers Move Out in Front

EDMONTON (CP)—Edmonton Flyers defeated New Westminster Royals 3-1 Friday night to vault into first place in the Prairie Division of the Western Hockey League.

A crowd of 3,410 fans saw Gerry Leonard put Edmonton ahead with the only goal of the first period. After a scoreless second period, Max McNab tied the count at 1-1 early in the third. Three minutes later, at 5:08, Len Lunde put Edmonton ahead and then Chuck Holmes made it 3-1 for Edmonton.

The goal by McNab put him in the league individual point scoring lead with 17 points. He has six goals and 11 assists, and before the game was tied with Fred Hucul of Calgary Stampers.

McNab, uncovered on right wing, took a pass near the goal mouth and lifted the puck high into the Edmonton net.

Palmer Takes Lead; Ford Ties Balding

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (CP)—Toronto's Al Balding fell from first place in the San Diego open golf tournament Friday, but he clung to a second-place tie at the end of the third round. Arnold Palmer, former national amateur champion, moved into the lead by shooting a second straight 68 for a 15-under-par total of 201.

Balding, who shot a 64 in the second round to take a two-stroke lead on Palmer and Fred Hawkins, ran into putting troubles. He wound up with 71, one under par. That gave him 67-64-71—202. Doug Ford, Mahopac, N.Y., also had a 202 total.

Palmer, from Latrobe, Pa., carded a 65 in the opening round at Mission Valley Coun-try Club.

He shot a 32-36 in Friday's third straight sub-par round on the flat layout.

Ford blazed in with a 67 for 202 total to tie the Balding. He started with 66 and 69.

Toronto, Ottawa Football Winners

TORONTO (CP)—Toronto Argonauts today closed out their home schedule by whipping Montreal Alouettes 40-27 and ruining any chance the Alouettes had of finishing second in the Big Four football race.

At Ottawa the Rough Riders today ground out a 9-4 victory over Hamilton Tiger-Cats in the rain and mud at Lansdowne Park. The win leaves Ottawa two points behind the league-leading Ti-Cats.

Two-Way Reeve Fight in Saanich

(See also Page 17)

Saanich Coun. Eugene Diespecker, in a surprise announcement today, said he would resign his seat in mid-term to contest the reeveship race next month.

He made the announcement unaware that Reeve Arthur Ash several hours earlier had thrown his hat in the ring for re-election, but when told about it Coun. Diespecker said "I'm still going ahead with it."

Major Break in City Water Main

Break of a 12-inch water main at Douglas and Bay Streets at about 11:30 a.m. today cut off much of the water supply for Hillside-Douglas-Government Street areas.

The break should be repaired before midnight, said city public works superintendent Ray Byers.

Lay Down in Snow
For Self Destruction

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP)—A brilliant young scientist who died Monday night high on an Arctic glacier in northern Alaska was reported today to have lain down in the snow lightly clad "seeking self-destruction."

Dr. Richard C. Hubley's death was attributed to suicide by Col. Howard E. Currie, commander of the Arctic aeromedical laboratory at Ladd Air Force base here.

Currie flew back to Fairbanks during the night with Hubley's frozen body.

After an on-the-spot investigation, Currie said the 31-year-old geologist simply walked away from the glacier camp wearing only the lower part of a suit of winter underwear and Arctic footgear.

Two hundred yards from the hut where he and three fellow scientists had lived since April, Hubley lay down in the snow and permitted himself to freeze to death, Currie said.

Hubley was co-ordinator of all U.S. glacial research in the northern hemisphere in the international geophysical year program.

Boat Burns Off Island,
None Saved

SEATTLE (AP) — A large fishing vessel was destroyed by fire early today about 70 miles off the coast of Vancouver Island, and no survivors had been found by mid-day, coast guard headquarters here reported.

It was not known how many were aboard.

The fishboat, her superstructure burned and her hull aflame, was sighted by the Japanese freighter Meitetsu Maru.

The freighter radioed the coast guard rescue co-ordination centre that there was no sign of survivors, and an hour's search of the area was fruitless.

The vessel was described as about 70 feet long, of 50 gross tons and painted white.

Weather conditions were good for searching the area.

Position of the burning vessel was described by Search and Rescue Centre, Vancouver, as due west of Cape Flattery and south of Uclulet.

The Centre said reports from the Japanese freighter were fragmentary.

Two RCAF planes carried out a search early today and were later replaced by two U.S. Coast Guard aircraft out of Port Angeles.

The Canadian Department of Transport radio has asked all ships in the area to keep a lookout, but no private vessels have been specifically ordered to the scene.

Stalin's Power
Khrushchev Goal?

(From Times Wire Services)

WASHINGTON—Nikita Khrushchev's smashing victory over Marshal Georgi Zhukov could have ominous overtones for the future, officials here said today.

They said Khrushchev obviously has tightened his grip on the reins of Soviet power on a pattern set years ago by Joseph Stalin.

The big question here now is what Khrushchev will do with that power—if he can hold it.

Marshal Georgi Zhukov, dismissed as Soviet defence minister a week ago, has been removed from his posts in the Communist party hierarchy, it was announced today in Moscow.

He loses his membership of the party Praesidium, Russia's top executive body, and his place in the central committee, which shapes party policy, it was announced in a communiqué.

Zhukov, 60, was the first professional soldier ever to sit in the Praesidium. He was made a full member in July this year.

JAMES IS.
STRIKE
THURSDAY

About 150 workers at the Canadian Industries Ltd. explosives plant on James Island will go on strike Thursday at 6 a.m.

Federal 128, Canadian Chemical and Explosives Workers, set the strike deadline this morning at a meeting here when the members rejected a company offer.

Chief issues in the prospective shutdown of B.C.'s only explosives plant are the union shop and three weeks' annual vacation after 10 instead of 15 years.

Union officials blamed the lack of agreement between the two sides on "CIL's policy of directing its negotiations from Montreal instead of allowing settlement to be reached by their B.C. representative as required under the Labor Relations Act."

They said his victory over Zhukov could mean Khrushchev will have a freer rein over Soviet government-Communist party policies. Any resistance Zhukov provided against these policies "now have been diminished, they said.

Officials feared that—as Khrushchev assumes even more power the risk of a possible Soviet "miscalculation" on foreign affairs will increase.

Allen W. Dulles, chief of the Central Intelligence Agency, had said in a Sept. 19 speech in San Francisco that Khrushchev's "impetuosity and unpredictability remain a matter of grave concern in an international situation as tense as that of today."

Still Hiding;
Radio Holds Up
Taped Interview

The mystery of former Social Credit forests minister Robert Sommers assumed an almost cloak and dagger aspect within the last 24 hours following the announcement that Chief Justice Sloan, as a royal commission, will probe the truth or falsity of the charges he took bribes while serving in the government.

Up to now Sommers has managed to keep his movements a secret from the public since before he failed to appear in court last month to press his slander suit against lawyer David Sturdy.

Strangest development was the declaration by a local radio station that one of its commentators has tracked down Mr. Sommers and secured an exclusive taped interview with him, but will not present it to the public until Sunday night, at least four days since it was obtained.

A Vancouver radio station also claimed to have the interview which was "quite recent," but recorded before the announcement that Chief Justice Sloan would investigate the case.

It was presumed to be the same interview recorded by the Victoria commentator, but for reasons of exploitation is being withheld from the public until the Sunday night broadcast.

Meanwhile in Vancouver a newspaper, (The Province) claims to have discovered that Mr. Sommers has been living in Oregon and California for the last four months.

Reports Place Him at San Mateo, Reno

The paper said long investigations showed he spent most of July in San Mateo, just south of San Francisco. At the end of the month he stayed briefly in Reno, Nevada, and then returned to California, the paper said.

It added that during August he moved north to Klamath Falls, Oregon, and apparently stayed there while waiting to see his doctor from Castlegar and lawyer from Victoria.

The paper states he was definitely in Klamath Falls on August 30, presumably headed south. His lawyer, James Proudfoot, told the Supreme Court he last saw his client on August 28.

Mrs. Sommers, who is at the family home here, said she had last talked to him by phone on Wednesday but that when she phoned back to the same place on Thursday was told he had "checked out."

Mrs. Sommers said she has actually lost contact with her husband by phone, but she is certain he will get in touch with her in the near future.

In the meantime she is preserving his confidence as to where he has been.

However it is believed he is now back in the interior of British Columbia where his riding is located.

The main question is: does Mr. Sommers intend to appear before the Sloan commission?

Previously Mrs. Sommers said she is confident her husband will return and take every step to clear his name.

Meanwhile, Chief Justice Gordon Sloan advised The Times today that the precise date for the start of the commission "was a matter to be discussed with counsel" and that the Nov. 12 date originally announced was merely tentative.

"It may be some time between Nov. 12 and 18," the Chief Justice said.

"I am going to Vancouver tomorrow to attend the Court of Appeal Tuesday, and expect to discuss the date with counsel."

"The hearings will be expeditious. It is difficult to say exactly how long they will last—perhaps two or three weeks, perhaps more."

Third of a Series

Prof. Robert H. Goddard's treatise advocating extensive rocket research appeared in Washington in 1920. Prof. Hermann Oberth's book, proving the theoretical possibility of space travel, appeared in Munich in 1923. The reactions of the two audiences to these two works was as different as possible.

Goddard's book was received with a small amount of ridicule on the one hand and brought him a small measure of financial support on the other hand. But there was no scientific criticism or controversy.

Oberth's book was received with complete seriousness, caused many pages of learned criticism in professional journals and no financial support whatever. And it started things going on an international front.

As has been mentioned in a previous article, the Russians rediscovered their own space travel prophet Zolotov. More, they formed a committee for the exploration of the stratosphere and

In 1925 this committee published a two-volume report on the use of rockets for stratosphere exploration.

In France one of France's pioneer aviators, Robert Esnault-Pelterie (holder of pilot licence No. 4) got together with a Paris banker Andre Hirsch and established an annual award for the publication, or piece of research work, which contributed most to the advance of space travel.

In America, in the meantime, Goddard got his first liquid fuel rocket off the ground (1926) but did not make the news public, probably feeling that a range of 184 feet was not impressive enough.

In Germany, a number of people who had corresponded with Oberth decided that the next step had to be experimentation. This meant money and it was thought that the best way of raising money for experimentation was to found a society. The Society for Space Travel, Inc., was officially registered in 1927, and after some preliminaries Oberth became its president and I became its vice-president.

A few years later, G. Edward Pendray and David Laszler formed the American Interplanetary Society in New York; it was later renamed American Rocket Society and is now the largest society of professional rocket men, with 8,000 members.

A British Interplanetary Society was founded a year or two after the American Rocket Society. It is now the second largest of the rocket societies. George Bernard Shaw was one of its members.

The German Society for Space Travel had experimentation as its goal and even knew where to begin. The first job was to develop a device which was called the rocket motor.

The liquid fuel rockets as envisaged by Oberth were to burn a liquid fuel, such as gasoline, with liquid oxygen. To do this both liquids had to be fed separately into a combustion chamber and ignited at the instant of mixing.

Since this was something that had never been done before, quite a number of things went wrong. Valves froze shut and refused to open (or to close) at the proper moment. Rocket motors blew up with a noise like an exploding hand grenade. Once in a while they worked. It was evidently just a question of plugging. If we did it often enough we would learn how to do it right.

Flame From Rocket Motor a Problem

One major problem was the flame often burned its way out of the rocket motor. A cooling jacket full of cold water helped. In the end we had a nice rocket motor, made of aluminum, which was reasonably reliable. When visitors asked how we called it we had to disappoint them. That was the motor, period.

Oh, yes, privately we called it "the egg." That was its shape and it was about the size of a goose egg.

Trouble with the egg was that it usually burned up, even with cooling water, after a 30-second run. But 30 seconds was enough to push

Fuel Combination Pays Off

I suggested then, for theoretical reasons, to repeat it and try it with ethyl alcohol as a fuel, with some water added for bulk. It worked beautifully. The egg, running on ethyl alcohol and circulating the fuel through the cooling jacket first, became the forerunner of all of the large rocket motors to come.

The German V-2 rockets used this principle and the later American Viking rockets did and so did the rocket propelled research airplanes X-1 and X-1A.

One of the rocket societies which started then was one in Austria and its secretary, the engineer Guido, Baron von Pirquet began to develop a philosophy of rocket development which had been lacking.

First, he wrote, the rockets would be purely experimental. The first practical step would be the instrument-carrying rocket which Goddard had in mind. These would grow in size and the largest instrument carriers might be used for ultra-rapid mail transportation.

The mail rockets would grow in size, too, until they were large enough to carry a pilot and to leave the atmosphere. They would be the first space ships but their first job would be to build a station in space, a manned artificial satellite.

Baron von Pirquet's scheme (1929) still did not contain a missile, as may have been noticed.

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Forty years of Soviet Communist rule are to be marked by festivities throughout the Communist world glorifying the 1917 revolution led by Lenin.

Soviet Communist organizers have prepared a rare flourish of Marxist trumpets for Nov. 7, the anniversary of 40 years of Communist power.

Publishing houses have been instructed to bring out new works for the Nov. 7 "jubilee." The best poems and writings about the revolution will be issued.

Dmitri Shostakovich, the Soviet Union's leading composer, has completed his 11th symphony dedicated to the 40th anniversary.

Old Bolsheviks in the Soviet Union and abroad are writing their reminiscences.

DISPLAY TRIUMPHS

Efforts are being made in all fields of Soviet life, notably the technological and economic, designed to throw into high relief the triumphs of the Soviet system and its superiority over all others.

Forty years ago, Russia, in the words of the Soviet Communist party's central committee, was "a backward agrarian country ravaged by war and surrounded on all sides by imperialist capitalist states."

In the new mood of confidence and in conditions of mild prosperity, the Soviet citizen is a very different man from the unkempt worker and soldier fighters who manned the barricades in St. Petersburg (Leningrad) under the banner "Workers of the World Unite."

TARGET: BEAT U.S.

Nowadays, the slogan most frequently heard and seen in Moscow is "more meat, milk and butter—to overtake and surpass the United States in per capita production."

The deeper significance of these anniversary celebrations lies in the impetus they will give to the idea of titanic struggle between two systems—Communist and capitalist.

The Soviet people are accustomed to being told that their industry now outstrips those of all European countries. For them one final battle lies ahead—the battle to outdo the United States in every field of human endeavor.

INDIAN AFFAIRS PROBE GETS BACKING OF PAULL

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — Andrew Paull, president of the North American Indian Brotherhood, said Friday he agrees with Frank Calder, former Atlin MLA that there should be an investigation into the operation of the Indian Affairs Department.

Mr. Calder advocated the move in a letter to the Indian leader, in which he charged that the department has been lax in its administration, mainly because its personnel does not understand Indian problems.

Mr. Paull said Friday he has conferred with the government concerning an investigation and "the next move is up to them."

He said he does not anticipate any action until next spring.

DROP ARMS ANYWHERE

Russ Satellite Fleet Dangers Outlined

OTTAWA (CP) — An expert on missiles and electronics says the Russians conceivably could put up fleets of earth satellites which could drop weapons anywhere the Soviets chose.

He also suggests that satellites might be used to render useless by electronic means any defence against the intercontinental ballistic missile.

The expert is Group Capt. C. B. Limbrick, recently retired from the RCAF. He was director of the air force's guided missiles and special weapons branch and also director of radio warfare.

He makes his comments in the most recent issue of the monthly "Canadian trade journal, Aircraft."

Group Capt. Limbrick says the use of radiating electronic devices such as radar successful during most of the Second World War has been drastically limited by the development of powerful electronic counter-measures.

North America's three aircraft warning networks—the DEW (distant early warning) radar line, the mid-Canada chain and the Pinetree system—are all radiating electronic devices.

Group Capt. Limbrick says the intercontinental ballistic missile—the Russians claim to have test-fired one successfully—can be controlled with non-radiating electronic devices.

But, "to the best of my knowledge the only way to detect and track an intercontinental ballistic missile would be by devices that radiate."

"Obviously, such installations can be located, and should suitable equipment be developed, counter-measures. Here then we have the uncomfortable situation of a quiet enemy and a noisy defence; i.e., the attacker is not vulnerable to electronic interference and the defence is."

Group Capt. Limbrick says operation of the earth satellite will give the Russians the first authentic information of flight and control problems in outer space and new data on temperature, pressure, functioning of electronic devices and power requirements.

All these would be of "tremendous value" in development and operation of intercontinental ballistic missiles.

Group Capt. Limbrick says every possible effort must be made in the application of science and invention to defence and that the gap between military requirements and delivery of the equipment must be closed.

Stevens said China had once been a good market for B.C.'s salt herring, but "refusal to recognize China and the U.S. dictation regarding trade has prevented the market being reopened." Now, however, the China market appeared to be opening.

Homer Stevens, secretary of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union, said Friday an exception would be made in the cases of two firms.

The fisheries association and union have signed an agreement providing for extension of all the terms and conditions of the old agreement to cover salt herring operations at Francis Miller and Co. Ltd. and Nelson Brothers Fisheries Ltd.

The companies will be permitted to operate two herring boats each, the fish to be used only for canning or salting for the duration of the strike.

Ike 'Too Slow' on Sputnik

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Former president Truman charged Friday night that President Eisenhower was "agonizingly slow" to sense the new danger posed by the successful launching of a Russian satellite.

In a speech peppered with scorn for the administration, particularly with reference to national defence and foreign af-airs, the ex-president told a Jefferson-Jackson Day banquet audience: "While the Russians were demonstrating their scientific advances, the administration was actually issuing secret orders cutting down on basic research in the defence establishment."
